Skills, games and sports are for living

By Ruth Gunden

Ruth Gunden has taught at GC since 1953. She is professor of physical education, coordinator of women's intramural sports and coach of women's intercollegiate tennis and basketball.

For nearly as long as I can remember, games, sports — movement of some type — have been a positive part of my life. I have experienced the exhilaration, the integration, the camaraderie that such activities offer. I know too something of the frustration, the disappointment, the feeling of failure that may accompany physical challenges. My evaluation of the net worth of these experiences is evident by the work I am now doing.

A large portion of my time and energy is committed to assisting others to discover the satisfaction and the contribution to wholeness available through physical activities. I believe that the knowledge and refinement of the movement capabilities and the acquisition of a variety of sport skills for sheer enjoyment, recreation and for coping with a future shock existence may be among our most important personal resources.

A sound body to house a keen mind

The human body is made for movement. Its normal development depends upon continued use of the muscle-bone-nerve structure. The body part that is not exercised atrophies and may become non-functional. This is a fact that responsible persons do not ignore. They concern themselves with keeping a sound body within which a keen mind and a vibrant spirit can develop most effectively.

Moreover, the human body is designed for skillful movement. Complex patterns of movement, refined through disciplined practice, are within the reach of anyone who is willing to expend the effort. Goshen College wants to provide the formal and informal curriculum, facilities and leadership to encourage the development of movement to varying levels of skillfulness.

Participants create, spectators only observe

For most persons, the priority of other worthwhile endeavors precludes the honing of a skill to the Olympic caliber. Less highly skilled movement has its magnificence however. The well executed play leading to an accurately placed volleyball spike is a thing of beauty to watch, but the greater thrill is being an integral part of that creation.

Movement is one of only two ways that humans have to establish meaningful ties. Most of us are more conscious of the other mode of social interaction, language. The simplest forms of movement and language are learned without formalized instruction but the complexities of both have to be taught.

Sports as a microcosm of life

In learning to interact, the moving person has a chance to use nearly the whole range of social processes. Games are not just competitive; they are cooperative, conflictual, assimilative and accommodative too. Because sports stimulate interaction within the framework of rules and traditions, they can be considered a microcosm of life.

Players are in situations that permit them to test themselves and to discover what really is there. Sometimes a particular culture tries to make each outcome too crucial. Wise players recognize it is a game and they can come back to try again another day.

The adventure of new understandings of self and others

The win or loss is temporary; the confrontation and discovery, painful though they may be, is where it is at. Those who accompany the players in this adventure find the greatest challenge in keeping the context clear and in helping each establish meaningful ties with self and others.

The utilization of innate interests and needs in the taming and the nurturing of the personality makes sense. Living is intended to be a joyful, meaningful adventure. The central issue in a person realizing an abundant life is a spiritual one. But a person is a mind-body-spirit entity, and how that complexity interrelates is relatively unknown. My learning and my teaching is based upon the assumption that there is not only immediate but also ultimate worth in the consideration of the physical aspect of that entity.

Mennonite writers' conference is set

Urie Bender, drama

Dolores W. Frese, guest speaker, novel

J. Daniel Hess, magazine articles

Nick Lindsay, poetry

A weekend Mennonite Writers' Conference for amateur and professional writers is planned for February 28 through March 2, 1975, at Goshen College. The conference is sponsored by the English department and the Center for Discipleship.

Five writers representing poetry, fiction, drama, magazine writing and marketing of manuscripts will be resource persons during the conference. Special guest speaker will be Dr. Dolores Frese, of the University of Notre Dame English faculty.

Novelist to open conference

Dr. Frese will open the conference with a speech entitled "The Silk Purse and the Sow's Ear: The Relation of the Writer to Her Cultural and Religious Heritage." Two of her published novels are Promised Spring and Learn to Say Goodbye. Another novel is currently under consideration for publication; a fourth novel is Didn't We Have Fun Yesterday? She has won a number of poetry and fiction awards including first and fourth prizes in poetry by the Atlantic Monthly in 1958.

Canadian prize-winning novelist to appear

Rudy Wiebe, member of the English faculty at the University of Alberta, Canada, will serve as resource person in fiction and will be the speaker in the S. A. Yoder Memorial Lecture, an event concurrent with the conference. He has written five novels, including The Temptations of Big Bear, winner of the 1973 Governor General's Award for Fiction, the highest literary prize in Canada.

Wiebe is also editor of three collections of stories and a former editor of Mennonite Brethren Herald. His topic at the conference will be "Squirting the Rosebush."

Poet Lindsay to address conference

Nick Lindsay, poet-in-residence and founder of Pinchpenny Press at GC, will be resource person in poetry. Lindsay has published many poems and books of poetry, plus Oral History of Edisto Island, a Pinchpenny volume that tells the story of a black community in North Carolina that has survived since the 1700's.

An interview with Lindsay is included in Studs Terkel's book, Working, published by Pantheon last year. His conference topic is "Art and Accident: The Gracefulness of Grace."

Hess and Schrock on program

J. Daniel Hess, professor of communication at GC, will be resource person on magazine writing. He is a member of the Mennonite Publication Board, a free-lance writer, and a researcher in mass communications. Hess will speak on "Before I Pound the Keys."

Paul Schrock, book editor of Herald Press, will explain the marketing of manuscripts in his speech, "Writing to Sell." He is editor of Alive, house organ of Mennonite Broadcasts, and The Way, a Mennonite Church publication, and a free-lance photographer. He is a former editor of Words of Cheer, and was founding editor of Purpose, both Mennonite Church publications.

Playwright Bender to speak

Urie Bender, playwright of three dramas about the Kansas Russian Mennonites, the Mennonite Brethren and the Amish of Ontario, will be the resource person on drama and will speak on "Without Form and Void — The Making of a Drama."

Bender, a native of Canada, has been pastor, teacher, editor, public relations consultant, advertising manager and play producer. He has written three books and many short stories and articles. Currently Bender is writer-in-residence at Conrad Grebel College.

Evaluation service for unpublished works

Conference participants may bring unpublished manuscripts for evaluation. They may also submit in advance an unpublished short story, a chapter of a novel, a one-act play, one act of a full-length play, a magazine article or several poems for a written evaluation by one of the resource persons. A collection of writings contributed by workshop participants will be published in spring 1975 by Pinchpenny Press.

Registration for the three-day conference is $12 for non-students and $5 for students. There is a $10 fee for persons wanting written evaluations of their works by one of the resource persons. The works must be submitted by Feb. 1, 1975.

Registrations for the workshop may be sent to the Goshen College English department, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526. Those who register in advance will receive a complimentary Pinchpenny Press volume of prose or poetry. Registrations will also be accepted at the time of the conference.

Keeping up with the faculty

For convenience of alumni readers, years of service appear in parentheses after each faculty person's name.

Betty Lorenz

Betty J. Lorenz '68 (1969, 1971-74), formerly of the nursing faculty, assumed the position of director of nursing services at Elkhart General Hospital last August 1. At her post Mrs. Lorenz supervises about 275 employees. She also has a close relationship with GC through her function of coordinating hospital facilities for the clinical experiences of GC junior and senior nursing students. Elkhart General will have 400 beds when the 100-beds addition soon opens.

Art prof Marvin P. Bartel (1970-) is designer of the playground area at the rear of Eighth Street Mennonite Church for its nursery school program. In place of traditional styles of equipment, the playground includes a telephone pole giraffe for climbing and swinging, a snail slide, and a hollowed fish with space for crawling.

Chamber ensemble provides 'rare listening'

Doyle Preheim (1972-), baritone, Lon Sherer (1959-), violin, Mary Oyer '45 (1945-), cello, and Kathryn Sherer '54 (1965-), piano and harpsichord, comprising the GC Chamber Ensemble, performed in the Conrad Grebel College Music-Lecture Series in the University of Waterloo's Theatre of the Arts last October 5. On the program were two biblical sonatas by Biber, cantatas by Telemann and J. S. Bach, a group of old English songs, and the Bach Viola da Gamba Sonata No. 1 in G with continuo.

W. J. Pitcher, of the Kitchener-Waterloo Record critiqued the performance: "A violin professor from Goshen College provided a rare listening experience Saturday night. . . Another fine reward of this program was the singing of baritone Doyle Preheim. . . This dark colored, rich voice is one of the best baritones I have heard in local programming for some time. The artist's command of style and his musicianship, together with his smooth and admirably free production, mark him as an unusual talent. . . Cellist Mary Oyer displayed a sure sense of style . . . This is the ninth season for the Conrad Grebel series and the Goshen ensemble certainly provided an impressive start."

Returns to Costa Rica

Humberto Perez (1971-74), former assistant professor of Spanish, returned to Costa Rica late last summer. He writes, "We are settled in a small house about a 15-minutes ride from the Methodist School and the U. of Costa Rica. . . My job is very difficult but most challenging. I'm the sub-director of the Methodist School, which is going through a serious economic crisis and is seriously questioning its role in the Costa Rican society. . . At the School of Education of the U. of Costa Rica, I teach two courses in Foundations in Education and also coordinate that department, made up of six professors."

Recent publications

Carl Kreider '36 (1940-), professor of economics and dean for 26 years, wrote "The Fall of the Almighty Dollar: An Essay in Polemics." The article appeared in Journal of Social Sciences last May.

Calvin Redekop '49 (1962, 1967-), professor of sociology, has written "A New Look at Sect Development." It appeared in last September's issue of Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion.

Arthur A. Smucker '49 (1953-), professor of chemistry, and associates have written "Comparison of Purified Lactate Dehydrogenases from Normal Rat Liver and Morris Hepatomas in Rats and in Culture." It appeared in Biochimica et Biophysica Acta, 1974.

Study-Service Trimester leaders

Leaders of Study-Service Trimester (SST) units this year are Wilbur Birky '63 (1964-), associate professor of English, and Fanni, in Costa Rica; Arlin Hunsberger (1968-), director of international education, and Naomi '55, in Haiti; J. Howard Kauffman '47 (1948-), professor of sociology, and Verda '43, in Belize (formerly British Honduras); and Norman Kauffmann (1969-), associate dean of students and assistant professor of psychology, and Sharon '64, in Honduras. Leading SST units in 1975-76 will be Ervin Beck '59 (1967-), associate professor of English, and Phyllis '59, in Belize; Delmar Good '62 (1967-), associate professor of economics, and Lou Ann, in Costa Rica; Doyle Preheim (1972-), associate professor of music, and LaDonna, in Haiti; and Robert Yoder (1968-), associate professor of Spanish, and Dorothy, in Honduras. Henry Weaver (1957-), provost, and Mary '52, will lead the Poland unit, spring 1975.

Clubs invite parents, pastors

East to west, north to south, regional club activity among alumni is at an all-time high this year. Ten clubs met between late October and mid December in Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Ontario, Maryland, Oregon, California, Colorado and Arizona.

The regional club concept was expanded this fall to include parents of current GC students, local pastors, local members of the Board of Overseers and local members of the Mennonite Board of Education. As Daryl Nofziger '67, director of alumni relations, explains, "Parents, pastors and board members have much in common with alumni. They are welcome to come to the regional meetings and be a part of them. The trend of the future, as I see it, is 'regional' meetings, not for alumni only, but for all those who have ties with GC."

Elkhart, IN, region, October 8

Forty-eight Elkhartans with city or rural route addresses attended the October 8 dinner meeting at Parkway Inn, Elkhart. Feature of the evening was The Proposal, by Anton Chekhov, presented by the GC drama department.

Arranging the evening were Delbert Detwiler '53, Lloyd Hartzler '38 who also was toastmaster, and Arlene Martin Mark '50. The committee for 1975 is Harold E. Hartzler '56, chairman, Paula Geiser '68 Gerber, and Peter R. C. Classen '51.

Kitchener, Ont., region, October 26

A sack-lunch fellowship and discussion of "peoplehood education" comprised the October 26 meeting at Rockway Mennonite School, Kitchener, Ontario. The meeting was for alumni of any Mennonite Church school and more than 40 were there, counting a contingent representing GC.

The evening centered in discussion of three questions pointed to alumni: (1) How has your experience at a church school affected your understanding of what the church is and what it means to function in a community of believers? (2) Has your experience at a church school helped equip you to deal with real-life situations? Why, or why not? (3) As a member of a congregation, what responsibility do you have to both the church and the school which provided for your education?

Among those arranging the evening and on the program were: Benno Barg, Ralph Brubacher, Ron Rempel '68, Robert L. '73 and Janice Ebersole '70 Shantz, Robert Smith, and Mark Yantzi.

Greater Washington-Baltimore region, November 2

The first GC meeting ever in the nation's capital area attracted 48 on November 2. Invitees included alumni living in Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland (except the "panhandle") and Virginia north and east of the Rappahannock River.

The dinner was at the Center for Adult Education at the University of Maryland, College Park, MD. Speaker was Henry D. Weaver, provost of GC, who introduced his address with the title, "Carnegie, Cucumbers and 1984." Toastmaster was Melvin J. Loewen '49. Leading the Alma Mater was Sally Roeschley '59 White.

In charge of arrangements were Annabelle Zuercher '60 Kratz, Anne Quiring '60 Miller, and Robert J. Moser '61, with special thanks to Cleo Weaver for behind-the-scenes work in securing a place for the meeting.

Chosen to arrange the next meeting were Sidney Kreider '60, Anne Quiring '60 Miller, Carol Jean Roupp '56 Weber and Galen Yoder '67.

Alumni, friends and parents of Ohio's Holmes County region met last November. Seventy-five were present.

Western Pennsylvania and Maryland dinner at Penn Alps, Grantsville, MD, November 9. The after-dinner program was devoted to the Alumni Mini-SST in Haiti, 1973, with Ralph '41 and Elizabeth Sieber '39 Hernley, Scottdale, PA, and Gordon '51 and Esther Detwiler '65 Yoder, Elkhart, IN, speaking.

In charge of the evening were David Cressman '61, president; Willard M. Martin '61, vice-president; Esther Eash '46 Yoder, secretary; and Ada V. Schrock '46, treasurer. Elected president for the three-year term, 1975-78, was Richard Kauffman '68, succeeding Cressman who has served since 1971.

Holmes County, Ohio, region, November 16

Alumni and friends of GC from Holmes, Stark, Knox, Tuscarawas and Coshocton counties met at Der Dutchman Restaurant, Walnut Creek, OH, November 16, for a family-style dinner. Afterward, Atlee and Winifred Beechy, of Goshen, IN, reported on their experiences as leaders of the first Study-Service Trimester in Poland. The Beechys were in Poland April-August, 1974.

Arranging the meeting were Paul Roth '53, president; Art Mullet '67, vice-president; and Ellen Miller '49 Miller, secretary-treasurer. Planning the 1975-76 meeting will be Art Mullet '67, president; Colin Mishler '67, vice-president; and Grace Glick '49, secretary-treasurer.

As the Bulletin went to press, six regional meetings had been planned and details at press time are below. A full report of them will be made in a future issue.

Report of Puerto Rico club

As the Bulletin went to press, the report of the early 1974 meeting of alumni in Puerto Rico arrived. The group of about 45 met at Betania Mennonite School, of Aibonito, last Feb. 18 for a covered dish supper in honor of President Emeritus Ernest E. Miller and Mrs. Miller.

During the program Miller told of what was going on at the college and then showed pictures of his earlier work and travels in India.

Honor roll of memorial and tribute gifts

Thank you. Goshen College received 69 memorial and tribute gifts totaling $4,077 between July 1 and November 15, 1974.

The Tribute Gifts Program receives gifts at any time in honor or in memory of respected individuals. The thoughtfulness of donors makes possible acquisitions for the library as well as such special projects as new music instruments and strengthened endowment.

Gifts may be for a variety of occasions, as the list below shows — to perpetuate the memory of a loved one, to express appreciation for a kindness, to celebrate a birthday or wedding anniversary, to honor a former teacher.

To make a gift in memory or in honor of a loved one, friend or associate, send your gift, your name, and the name of the person you are honoring or memorializing, to Daniel E. Kauffman, director of college relations, Goshen College, Goshen, IN. In the current program, every $25 multiple of your gift will provide and process a book in the college library.

All gifts are tax deductible and are promptly acknowledged. The amount of gift is never mentioned in any publicity or on the bookplate of the book(s) provided by you.

Just a short note of thanks for the continuing work of GC in preparing persons to be all they can be, through Christ, in today's shattered world. As the U.S.A. becomes more and more egocentric (dropping language requirements in high school, expecting foreign diplomats and visitors to speak English, demanding that third world countries lower prices of oil lest there be a hardship for the family who has two cars and a boat to be fueled, ad nauseam), it is good to see GC's continuing awareness of the importance of international educational experience.

We continue to be challenged by the opportunities for work and service here, as well as increased awareness of what true and eternal values are, again due in part to the input at GC. May God grant wisdom and courage that we may not fail our fellowman or Him.

I appreciate what GC did . . . and does.

Jocele Meyer '50: the common goal for alumni and church

As told to Mervin Zook

Jocele Thut '50 Meyer, national chairperson of the '75 Alumni Fund for Great Teaching, and Husband Art '50 mulch seedlings on a severely-eroded mine spoil bank on their Coshocton County (Ohio) farm.

Mrs. Meyer, national chairperson of the '75 Alumni Fund, speaks:

I feel very definitely alumni should be interested in Goshen. Beyond their financial contributions they could also visit the college, affirm the students and faculty, become aware of the changes in curriculum.

On the role of the church

The church must assume more financial support for the college because of the high cost of education to the individual student. If more church constituents are to be able to take advantage of the college, the tuition cost must be within each person's grasp. If Goshen is going to be called a church college, its costs must be competitive or within easy range of the costs of public institutions.

The trend of our Mennonite young people to strike off college as an option is a serious indictment for the church.

Alumni in the church must show interest

The Peoplehood Education thrust current in the church is an opportune time for alumni to show their interest. Prospective students must be encouraged to choose a church college. Congregations must be reminded of their responsibilities to the college.

One idea is for a congregational stewardship program to provide college scholarships for its young persons. Another idea is for congregations to support the college at a level so that tuition and costs become low enough for every student.

Alumni in the church must be interested, involved and a part of both college and church. They can give leadership to demonstrate that Christian education is a product jointly of college and church and an extension of both.

College must show evidence

Although the church has its job with respect to the college, the college has similar responsibilities. For one thing, it must continually give evidence of being part of the church. There is always a danger that it may become disattached. Now — in 1975 — is a good time for it to strengthen relations with the church.

I want to emphasize that Goshen is a Christian college. However, it cannot be Christian any more than the people involved in it.

Nevertheless, alumni and church constituents may always look at it critically, not in a fault-finding way, but in a constructive and affirming way. Only as alumni, church, parents and college work together can the common goal be met.

Another facet of Mrs. Meyer is her family and their project: restoration of an 80-acre farm in Coshocton County, Ohio, that was savagely strip-mined about 20 years ago. After becoming owners of the property a year and half ago, Jocele and her husband Art '50 and their sons Jerold '74 and Ron '75 and daughter Ann launched an unrelenting battle for its transformation.

They planted 1500 white and red pine seedlings on two acres of spoil bank area around the lake. They hauled away all manner of trash — three broken-down cars, an old bus, tires, tin cans — that had been dumped in the gullies and literally, everywhere. They cleaned up the house, an easy target for vandals, and the barn, sturdily constructed of hand-hewn logs. Scrap dealers dynamited a 105-ton dragline left by the strip miners to rid it from the land.

"The farm is our 10-year project," Art explains. "We want the wooded area to go back to nature for a wildlife and bird sanctuary — for deer, grouse, cottontails, raccoons, fox, groundhogs, and for the bluebirds and Carolina wrens. And, as a result of our first experience with our truck garden, we rediscovered how good garden vegetables tasted." Another of their joys last summer were the wild berries: one day they picked 23 quarts of wild blackberries. Wild raspberries, apples, cherries, pears, and elderberries were abundant, too, for both the Meyers and wildlife.

Irene Hartzler, Elkhart, IN, celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary Sept. 23 in Elkhart General Hospital, where Levi was hospitalized with a back ailment. The unusual celebration was photographed and covered by the Elkhart Truth. . .Dora Bigler '39 Hershberger, Elkhart, IN, was featured twice last fall in the Elkhart Truth for her imaginative teaching methods. On Sept. 26, the 200th anniversary of Johnny Appleseed's birth date, her elementary students ended their cider-making experience, begun a week earlier,with a special "tasting party." . . .Lloyd Hess '39, a schoolteacher at Jimtown, near Elkhart, IN, is the new vice president of the Elkhart County Fair Board. . . Eileen Bachman '40 Schertz, Lowpoint, IL, is teaching and Eldon and a son farm together. Of their other children, two daughters are at GC and one is employed at a Peoria day care center. A grandson is in Peru, South America, and his father is an airplane pilot. . .A. C. Yoder Jr. '35, Goshen, IN, was one of five recipients of Indiana University School of Dentistry's Distinguished Alumnus Award. The ceremonies were at last fall's dental conference in Bloomington.

Teacher placement is up

A higher percentage of teacher candidates from Goshen College was placed in 1974 than in 1973, J. B. Shenk, director of career services, recently announced.

In 1974, 88 per cent of elementary teacher candidates and 75 per cent of secondary teacher candidates who were graduated found jobs. These statistics compare to 1973 when 87 per cent of elementary teacher candidates and 46 per cent of secondary teacher candidates found employment. The 1974 figures are also above their 1972 counterparts of 66 per cent for elementary teacher candidates and 47 per cent for secondary teacher candidates.

Although it is difficult to see a trend in the annual figures, Shenk said that in the present economic conditions, 1974's showing of acceptances is very good. He added that part of the good showing is that many school systems over the years have gained confidence in GC grads.

Of the 1974 education students finding employment, 27 are secondary teachers and 30 are elementary teachers. They are teaching in 13 states and two South American nations.

Alumni prominent in '74 Michiana relief sale

The sale was at the Elkhart County fairgrounds last Sept. 28 and involved members of some 160 Indiana-Michigan congregations. The check is helping make service and relief efforts possible in Bangladesh, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Chad, Egypt, Haiti, Honduras, India, Jordan, Upper Volta, Vietnam and Zaire through Mennonite Central Committee, the official inter-Mennonite agency for international relief and service.

The 1975 sale is set for Sept. 27. Last year a number of alumni and parents of students made the sale an occasion to visit campus and friends as well as to support relief efforts through their purchases.

Student volunteers help in community

Among the several hundred student volunteers active in Goshen and surrounding communities is Peg McLaughlin (right), a freshman from Middlebury, IN. Peg is with Ron Brown, a blind student at the Elkhart County Rehabilitation Center. Brown is mounted on "Stormy," one of the horses used by Love Way Projects, which offers a therapeutic horseback riding program to handicapped persons. At the left is Jykla Wiegand, instructor.

Other students like Peg are working with the aging, the mentally retarded, the handicapped, and the emotionally disturbed; are helping staff boys and girls clubs, coffee houses, day care centers, and recreation programs; and are providing tutoring, construction services for limited-income homeowners, and transportation for residents at the county home or others who cannot care for themselves adequately. Students have also laid plans for a foster grandparents program at the county home.

Randall '71 and Tereza Schertz have accepted a Mennonite Central Committee assignment in agricultural extension and rural development, Brazil. A gift has been received for the Goshen College Library in tribute to
A constant Christian influence on the minds of the young

In your name. . .
In honor of a loved one. . .

A memorial that lives on and on

So often and for so many, the emotion of the occasion can overrule better judgment. Before you decide on an appropriate memorial, we suggest that you explore first. A time-honored choice is a gift that serves persons or a worthy cause.

The true measure of a Christian memorial is that it shall do Christian work. One idea for a memorial gift is a book (or books) for the Good Library at Goshen College.

The name of the person you honor and your name will appear on a specially designed bookplate as a permanent thanksgiving. Further, there will be recognition in the Bulletin.

The effect of a memorial gift is something beyond the ordinary. It honors the person not just for a moment but for years to come. The book (or books) in the Good Library will be provided for daily use by students and faculty. Long after your gift is made, the gift is benefitting students and teachers who will be serving mankind far into the future.

For further information about the Memorial and Tribute Gifts program or to pay tribute to a loved one, use the coupon below.

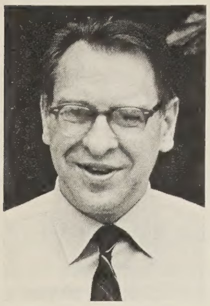
The enterprising spirit

By J. Lawrence Burkholder



J. Lawrence Burkholder is president of Goshen College and professor of Bible and philosophy.

Deep problems of the economy and political life are prompting many people to question the validity of our economic order and even the democratic system itself. Inflation, pollution, recession, corruption and unemployment suggest that the period of unparalleled growth since World War II may have been so excessive as to be fundamentally wrong.

Without denying an unrealistic and exploitative tendency within virtually all segments of society, I would like to uphold one of the underlying qualities of the postwar period. I refer to a spirit of enterprise which, though capable to selfish exploitation of human beings and of nature, is an essential quality for responsible citizenship, life in the church and personal fulfillment.

Enterprise as an educational objective

I am suggesting that insofar as enterprise requires calculation, investment, risk, adventure and production of goods or services it qualifies as an educational objective. I am of course not limiting enterprise to business enterprises alone. By enterprise I mean the desire to maximize one's abilities, to invest oneself in whatever is worthwhile, to work hard running the danger of failure, trusting God, oneself and the social order.

I write in this vein because of an attitude of resignation which many people are adopting in face of the insecurities of our time. Uncertainties of parents are sometimes rubbing off prematurely on their children. I was recently told about a high school senior who when counselled to get a college education asked where he will find $30,000 to buy a house. The fact that he had no immediate plans to buy a house (he didn't even have a girl friend) would suggest that the anxieties of our time had gotten through to him inordinately. He, like so many others today, seems to have lost the enterprising spirit which would look at a college education as a long term investment. The tendency of so many young people to settle for something short of their potential is alarming. In the religious realm it raises serious questions about the future leadership of the church.

Strength in a period of low motivation

The strengthening of the business curriculum comes at a time of low motivation in society and in the church. We hope that with those necessary refinements of motivation and social responsibility which must accompany business enterprise in the future, we may uphold legitimate drives and aggressive approaches to life at a time when mediocrity seems so easy and inviting.

We trust that what is good in the investment model may characterize the attitude not only of those who will opt for business careers but other courses as well. We hope that young people will regain the nerve to plunge into the deep waters of an unknown future. Instead of insisting upon instant gratification and premature security they will take advantage of every opportunity to become nothing less than their greatest possibility.

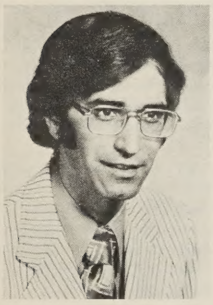
Small, rather than massive, is the emphasis

Courage at this period of history takes the form of humble people who are not overawed by massive institutions and historical trends. For small businesses, small colleges and people of rural background to succeed they must have convictions and an extra measure of nerve.

Our business department plans to emphasize the possibilities of small business in particular. This in itself would seem to run counter to historical trends. But a perceptive view of the historical situation may suggest that small businesses, small colleges, rural life, and all that has been "dispersed" during the past quarter century may correspond to a deep longing for human values which our whole system will seek to express in what some choose to call the "post-business" culture of the latter quarter of this century.

The ultimate questions in business

By Delmar G. Good



Delmar G. Good is associate professor of economics and chairperson of the department of business and economics

A few years ago Goshen College began offering a business course entitled Management Policy and Social Responsibility. Since then the course has become required for all business majors. Why should a course dealing with social responsibility and issues of values and ethics be required? By extension, does concern for responsibility and values contribute to "business success" in the real world? I would like to suggest several areas where persons of sensitivity, grounded in a biblical faith, will want to test their business activities by a rule of Christian ethics and responsibility.

First, the public is insisting that business leaders are in fact responsible for the general public welfare, whether they wish this responsibility or not. An executive of Cummins Engine Corporation caught this idea with the phrase, "responsibility to stakeholders." He suggested that company policy must be made in light of everyone who has a "stake" in the company — stockholders, to be sure, but also employees, suppliers, the community where the company was located, the managers, and even the public affected by others' use of a Cummins engine. All these groups are affected by Cummins' activities. True, the impacts are difficult to measure. Some people argue they should mainly be the concern of government. And the effects are sometimes both positive and negative, requiring difficult judgments. But simply to ignore the effects does not eliminate them, and is surely less than responsible.

Ethics for personal activities

Second, business persons must make decisions about their own personal activities. This might be called more narrowly business ethics. Clearly one's Christian commitment will affect one's decisions as to what is just business policy. The sensitive person will push beyond the criteria "is it legal?" in seeking to answer "is it right?"

In addition, Christians must come to terms with the assumptions of the economic, social and political environment in which they work. What Christian values are supported by our industrial society, and what Christian values are denied or damaged by accepted norms?

What is the meaning to life?

In a Harvard Business Review article O. A. Ohman observes:

> Certainly no people have ever had so much and enjoyed so little real satisfaction. Our economy has been abundantly productive, our standard of living is at an all-time peak, and yet we are tense, frustrated, and insecure people full of hostilities and anxieties.
> I am convinced that the central problem is not the division of the spoils. . . . Raising the price of prostitution does not make it the equivalent of love. Is our industrial discontent not in fact the expression of a hunger for a work life that has meaning in terms of higher and more enduring spiritual values?
> I do not imply that this search for real meaning in life is or should be limited to the hours on the job, but I do hold that the central values of our industrial society permeate our entire culture. (O.A. Ohman, "Skyhooks," Harvard Business Review, May-June, 1955.)

Observing that some of the values of our economic system, and of other systems too, often do not challenge the best in people, he concludes:

> Much as economic theory needs revision, I fear that this is not likely to cure our ills. Nor do I believe that profit-sharing or any other device for increasing workers' cut (desirable as the efforts may be) will give us what we really want. It is rather another type of sharing that is needed, a sharing of more worthy objectives, a sharing of the management function, and a sharing of mutual respect and Christian working relationships. (Ohman)

The question of ultimate goals and values

Thus, finally and over all, the sensitive person in business must face the matter of goals and purpose. If the immediate task is production, it must still be asked, "Production for what?" What is the impact on people of the production process itself, and the product's end use? If the immediate task is management, the question remains, "What are the ultimate goals and objectives of the group where I have administrative responsibility?" While some techniques and practices are better than others, and can and should be studied and learned, nonetheless "we observe again and again that a manager with sound values and a stewardship conception of his role as boss can be a pretty effective leader even though his techniques are quite unorthodox." (Ohman)

Does caring for responsibility and values contribute to "business success"? The question will only be answered in light of one's view of the importance of each person before God our Creator. The ultimate goals of our economic activity will have much to do with whether people may be used as means to ends, or whether service to God through recognition of human needs becomes the end itself. The caring for values then does not merely contribute to "business success," but defines what will be accepted as "success" itself.

The ultimate questions

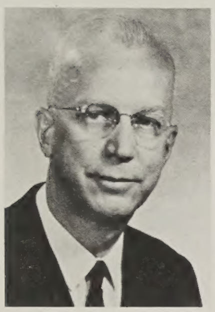
Why we mix business with liberal arts

By Carl Kreider



Carl Kreider, professor of economics, was dean of the college 1944-70. He has also served as provost and as acting president.

From the earliest days of Goshen College a highly significant number of students attended Goshen with the intention of entering careers in business. Although we were committed to the goals of liberal arts education it was not felt that this was in any way inconsistent with providing an education for business men and women.

About 10 years ago several national blue-ribbon committees of educators and business men and women made careful studies of the most desirable academic programs for the education of business leaders. Immediately after the reports of their research were published a faculty committee was appointed at Goshen College to study the implications of their findings for the business curriculum at Goshen. The committee spent nearly two years in its study, and out of its deliberations there emerged certain conclusions which have formed the basis for our present program in business.

Both business administration and liberal arts

1. The business leaders of the future need both solid instruction in the academic discipline of business administration and a firm background in the liberal arts. Business in the last quarter of the 20th century demands people who have both adequate command of the content of specialized studies in business and a broad liberal education which will enable them to perceive the interrelatedness of their specialized knowledge to the total of human experience.

2. The typical college of business administration, however, tends to become overspecialized. Goshen College cannot ape the program of the large specialized school, and in fact it should not do so if it is true to its basic objectives as a Christian liberal arts college.

Students are taught to think in business

3. The typical liberal arts college, on the other hand, usually does not offer a sufficiently rigorous background of courses in business administration. Business is an academic discipline in its own right. It is not adequate to tell students who are interested in business, "We teach you to think; it's your responsibility to learn about business on the job." Rather our stance must be: "We will teach you to think both in your formal study of business subjects and in the liberal arts courses which will enrich your college study."

4. A major in business is thoroughly consistent with the Goshen College objective of providing "Culture for Service." Business people serve as the back bone of many of the communities in the constituency of Goshen College. They not only provide leadership for the business affairs of the congregation but they serve as living demonstrations that the Christian life must be lived in the context of doing the work of today's world. They fear God as they serve their brothers and sisters in the church and as they contribute to the economic needs of our nation and the world.

Business education prepares for church roles

5. As the program of the church expands both at home and overseas, persons with specialized business education are needed both to assume leadership roles in formulating this program and to serve as they are called to carry it out.

6. Although a good business faculty for a liberal arts college need not be large it must be adequate to include both persons with a strong theoretical understanding of the business principles involved and persons with practical business experience. This implies adding full-time members to the business faculty as well as continuing to use as part-time specialists persons whose major employment lies outside the College.

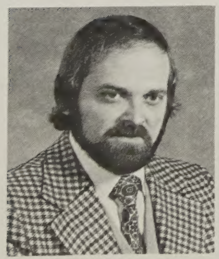
Business students enrich campus community

7. Just as business persons enrich the life of our congregations so also business students enrich the lives of other Goshen College students whose vocational objectives lie in other areas. Similarly, the non-business student enriches the educational environment of the business major. The liberal arts college of over 1,000 students provides an unusual setting for this kind of stimulating interaction.

The present business curriculum has been built on these foundations. At the same time it remains under constant scrutiny that it may continue to adapt to the changing needs of a broader social order which is in a constant state of flux.

Business and Christianity: is there a hope?

By Rudolf W. Dyck



Rudolf W. Dyck is visiting lecturer in business, vice-president of Dyck's Containers and Forest Products Ltd., of Winnipeg, Manitoba, and a partner in Dueck and Dyck, owner-operators of Peddler's Village of Goshen.

Is it possible for the Christian college student to consider seriously a life in business? Can anyone, including the person in business, consider it seriously? The people I meet in business have a visceral faith that answers "Yes," those in academia frequently view the mounting profits of our larger business organizations and answer "Never"!

From my vantage point as businessman-teacher it appears that our concerned Christian community often lives in two different camps. There are those who theorize but seldom practice what they theorize about and those who practice but rarely think about the essence of what they are engaged in. There are, in short, "the people of thought" and "the people of affairs."

Can we at Goshen College bridge this gap? The answer will depend, in large measure, on the frankness with which we look at the apparent dichotomy between business and Christianity.

The danger in the "pulpit" idea excluding all others

Many of us have been raised on the notion that we are spirit and that our body is merely there to give house to it. To this has been added the "pulpit" idea that we are not citizens of this world and that our permanent home is in the world to come. This view, taken by itself, is hardly conducive to the development of a sensitive and discerning attitude toward the deeds and aspirations of people. Reciting the great virtues of our faith in this context will cause the person in business to feel his pursuit to be a materialistic and selfish occupation. This is both dangerous and false.

The danger, when the good-bad syndrome sets in, is that business persons are tempted either to live vicariously by giving more money to charitable causes to salve their consciences, or to hurl themselves into the activities of life and scorn reflection altogether. Either way they suffer from the lack of a personal psychology that could lift them above the base motives attributed to their cause which they know in their hearts do not apply.

The "spirit only" view is also false because man and woman and their world are material. All have material needs and it is neither unworthy nor wrong to focus on them. We cannot escape the fact that all of us must be economists to a degree. Those who think they can escape it are merely placing the burden of their existence onto others.

An economic theology

This is why we need to develop an economic theology at Goshen College and throughout our community. Central to it, I believe, should be the view that Christians in business fulfill a worthy calling to the extent to which they seek out a need in society that can be legitimately satisfied. Whether they risk everything as entrepreneurs or coordinate people, raw materials, technology and ideas as a manager producing goods and services, they benefit society. That is precisely the purpose of the businessperson as it is of everyone else, namely, that we spend our time and energy in socially beneficial pursuits.

If, however, we become preoccupied with "creating" a demand for any product or service, whether by stimulating competitive emulation or by promoting dissatisfaction, we render a serious disservice to society. This can be neither encouraged nor condoned.

Business and Christianity

Balance and purpose are necessary

Our business philosophy must therefore be couched in a holistic approach to life that recognizes its many dimensions and facets. Concentrating on material wants can easily lead to the repression of the spiritual dimension: the realm of meaning. And elevating the human spirit to the neglect of its basic needs necessarily gives rise to a parasitic existence.

Both balance and purpose are necessary in business and in a business education program. To the extent to which we can implement this in our classrooms and factories we will overcome the dichotomy between Christianity and business, between spirit and material presence. They are not in essence and need not in practice be mutually exclusive opposites but can be fused to form a new higher unity in our lives.

Where have all the business grads gone?

Lois E. Winey is assistant professor of business.

Lois E. Winey, assistant professor of business and a member of the faculty since 1937, has nurtured an interest in the careers and post-college activities of business and economics students for many years.

For this Bulletin, she used the alumni files and other sources to gather information on graduates with majors in business and economics for the years 1958 to 1973. In these 16 classes there were 201 such graduates. Her work points to a larger, more comprehensive survey of all business and economics students that she has carved out for herself to do during 1975. Among her plans is a questionnaire to be sent to former students.

One of the frustrations in doing a respectable survey is the paucity of information about former students, whether they were graduated or terminated their studies before completing four years. Business and economics students, like many alumni, do not keep the college up to date on their whereabouts, job responsibilities and community involvements.

Findings about the grads, 1958-73

In a quick overview, of the 199 living business and economics graduates of the years, 1958-73, 48 have earned master's degrees. One is a medical doctor and one has the doctor's degree and is in higher education. Seven are known to be in graduate school now.

Of the graduates, 37 were certified at Goshen College to teach business in public high schools. Of these, 31 actually entered teaching as a career, and at least 13 of these are in teaching positions today.

In church-related service, 12 have been, or are currently, in overseas service. Twenty-five have, or presently are, in church-related service in the States or Canada.

In her study of origins and current addresses of business and economics graduates, Miss Winey found that the South and the West gained more students than they had sent to GC. Table 1 gives the details.

In her study of job classifications, accounting was the most popular field for those whom the college had information. The next popular fields were hospital administration and banking. However, graduates were counted in 18 classifications plus a variety of businesses. Details are in Table 2.

A final part of the research shows that the combination of business and economics consistently ranks sixth or higher among all major fields in number of graduates since 1958. (See Table 3.)

Preparation for business is a purpose

Although not often recalled, Elkhart Institute and its successor, Goshen College, were founded to prepare young persons of the Mennonite Church for business careers. The catalog of 1896 stated:

> Our courses of study furnish exactly what is needed in the daily business of every Merchant, Agent, Manufacturer, Banker, Teacher, Bookkeeper, Clerk, Farmer — in short, of any man who wishes to lead a useful and successful life or to manage discreetly any property which may be placed in his hands.

The purpose has been restated from time to time through the years to keep abreast with the changing times and demands for persons qualified for business and grounded in the liberal arts.

Business and its need for the liberal arts

By Art DeFehr

Art DeFehr, a 1965 GC grad and a 1967 M.B.A. graduate of Harvard University, is general manager of A. A. DeFehr Manufacturing Ltd., of Winnipeg, Manitoba. He recently completed two years in Bangladesh as program director for Mennonite Central Committee.

"And before you leave the market place, see that no one has gone his way with empty hands. For the master spirit of the earth shall not sleep peacefully upon the wind till the needs of the least of you are satisfied."

A simple but profound thought which somehow was omitted from my many courses in economics, administration, accounting, marketing and finance. But I did discover Kahlil Gibran during an extra year of studies at Goshen College. Each area of studies provides another vantage point, another perspective, allowing us to balance the various considerations involved in every event.

It is currently popular to speak of the "systems approach," recognizing the complexity of business, social and government problems. Thus we focus the skills of many different people and areas of expertise on an issue and hope for truth to emerge. If we divide the light spectrum into parts and allow each person in a group to see only one color, can we see the parts or the whole? Each of us develop the facility to see within a certain portion of the spectrum of knowledge and expertise, but rarely more than a small portion. The liberal arts program is an opportunity to gain some facility over a broad range of the spectrum.

The business world is organized along highly specialized functional lines, or limited spectrum. With increasing responsibility the range of vision is expected to increase, but pressures don't allow the kind of new experience required to broaden the spectrum. The result is that persons with a finely honed perspective in one area like production or finance become involved in broad decisions which influence our society in many ways.

A significant liberal arts experience in addition to my business training has enabled me to comprehend the broader dimensions of my business and its impact on the community. This provides upward mobility since the limited range of experience is not a deterrent. The broader perspective also permits easier transfer of experiences to new situations and has led to a recent overseas assignment. This kind of mobility leads to a greatly enhanced sense of personal freedom.

My only comment on the liberal arts is that they are taught at the wrong time. Students should develop an area of special interest and then broaden their vision by looking at it from various new perspectives. The liberal arts should be an integrating force rather than a survey of disparate areas, and should, therefore, be taught toward the end of the college years.

Toward academic excellence

By J. Lawrence Burkholder

Because of overseas missionary service in India in the 1920's and 1930's, Miller had a perspective of worldwide Christian service. During his presidency, he sponsored the Foreign Missions Fellowship and helped plan the annual missionary conference and annual missionary drive. In this 1947 picture are, left to right, Eunice Litwiller Miller, Doris Gunden Metzler, Lucille Graber Swartzendruber, Ernest Miller.

J. Lawrence Burkholder, who joined the faculty in 1949 under Miller's administration, is president of the College.

The period of E. E. Miller's administration (1940-1954) represents a stage in the development of Goshen College analogous to a stage in the life cycle. It is the stage of adolescence during which the offspring moves from the independence of childhood toward the maturity of adulthood.

Within the family of faith the College was born to develop and transmit the values and beliefs of the Mennonite Church. In its infancy the churches guarded and disciplined the College with the nervousness of parents with a precocious first child. The parents feared that the child would become so deeply involved in the world that it would depart from its heritage.

The most critical stage in the life cycle for most children is adolescence. During adolescence children attempt to establish their identities. They think their own thoughts, choose their own vocabularies, test their strength outside the home and seek to become individuals in their own rights.

Under E. E. Miller's direction, the College attempted to do by analogy just that. It attempted to work out the implications of its commitment to the liberal arts. It sought academic excellence and, consequently, recognition as one of the better small colleges in the Middle West. The appointment of Carl Kreider as Dean in 1941 was a most propitious appointment. Under Dean Kreider's direction the faculty grew at a time when qualified professors were hard to find. A number of academic achievements mark President Miller's leadership. In 1941 the College was accredited by the North Central Association. In 1942 the Foreign Missions Fellowship program was launched and an annual missionary conference and fund drive were inaugurated in 1943. A foreign student program begun in 1946 gave Goshen College its distinctive international character. Under President Miller's administration Goshen College established the first collegiate nursing curriculum in Indiana. Finally, President Miller inspired a generation of highly motivated young people to go on to graduate school. Many of these are church and professional leaders today.

The post war emphasis was one of academic excellence. If the emphasis upon Ph.D.s, accreditment, professional image and respectability would seem slightly exaggerated to a generation so inured to excellence as to react against it, one must remember that a college which does not progress academically actually will be rejected by its constituency in the long run.

Adolescence is critical for future relationships between children and their parents. It is negotiated best by respectful children and trustful parents. So with the college in its relation to the church. It is to President Miller's credit that he kept in touch with the Church and that he emphasized the Mennonite faith at a time when the College increased its commitment to higher education in the liberal arts tradition. The period of adolescence for Goshen was a period of inevitable strain but did not result in alienation.

By virtue of the fact that President Miller led the College successfully through a critical stage of growing up, the ground was laid for later periods when the wisdom and maturity of riper years would enable both the College and Church to realize how much they need one another.

Establishing a financial base

By Carl Kreider

Carl Kreider, on the economics faculty since 1940, was appointed dean by Ernest Miller in 1944, and served at that post until 1970.

When Ernest E. Miller assumed the presidency of Goshen College 35 years ago the institution was a small, unaccredited, struggling college of about 250 students. This was no adverse reflection on the people who had led and served the College in the decades prior to that time. Only the heroic efforts of these great leaders of the past had enabled it to survive at all through the troublesome years of World War I, church difficulties of the 1920s and the Great Depression of the 1930s.

Ernest E. Miller was convinced that if Goshen College were to grow and meet the needs of the church and community of the future one of the prime priorities was to establish a firm financial base for the institution. Although the faculty had made tremendous financial sacrifices in the 1930s to keep the College afloat, Miller saw clearly that it could not move forward unless a debt which had been accumulated in these hard years was eliminated. His initial task, therefore, was not to build buildings but to liquidate debt. The success of this debt elimination drive was crucial to the securing of accreditation. Accreditation in 1941 enabled the College to maintain a student body of almost constant size during the difficult years of World War II — the first four years of Miller's presidency. This was possible because although men students were drafted the enrollment of women students increased. When the men returned to the campus at the end of the war total enrollment doubled in a period of only two years.

But the very increase in enrollment created two new financial problems. (1) Inasmuch as student fees do not cover educational expenses, additional funds for operating budget were urgently needed to meet the needs of the rapidly growing student body. (2) The physical plant needed to be expanded — especially to provide auditorium, recreational and dormitory space. His work in meeting these two problems still stands more than two decades later and should continue to serve many more years.

But Ernest Miller's vision extended beyond the solution of these two immediate problems. He perceived that Goshen would continue to grow and in growing would need more land. Subsequent events amply justified this judgment. He purchased land before the prices became the inflated ones we know today. He developed a campus which was of ample size to provide for another doubling of student body which occurred between the mid 50s and the mid 60s.

Goshen's administration today is keenly aware that financial problems will always be some of the most vexing which a high quality church liberal arts college must face. The strengthening of the financial base during the years of 1940-54 have provided a strong foundation on which subsequent leaders have built the Goshen College we know today.

Maker of international friends

By Viola M. Good

Viola Good, on the faculty since 1939, is advisor to international students and assistant professor of communication.

Three months after his inauguration President E. E. Miller was confronted with the problems which emerged as a result of the passage of the National Training and Selective Service Act which affected all U.S. educational institutions. This situation called into play both the breadth and depth of President Miller's vision and administrative capacity.

He called a meeting of the presidents of all Mennonite and affiliated colleges which resulted in the formation of the Council of Mennonite Colleges; he served as president for the first four years of its existence. This organization in collaboration with Mennonite Central Committee gave birth to the Relief Workers Training School at Goshen College to serve as a counterpart to the government subsidized military training program of the major universities and colleges. Because of Congressional objections, the Relief Training students could not serve immediately. However, there were desirable long-range results in overseas relief work and leadership after the war.

As the war came to a close there were great needs for the healing of wounds. President Miller again served as the catalyst, first to bring European and then Japanese young people to Mennonite colleges for study to strengthen the bonds of inter-Mennonite and international fellowship. The geographical distribution shifted with the world situation. A threat of the loss of financial support from a prominent

Work-days help build Union

Student work-days — a two-day recess from classes — was inaugurated in 1947 during Miller's presidency. Ninety-five per cent of the 600 students took jobs in the community and donated their earnings to the Union building fund. The innovation attracted wide attention and put the city of Goshen and the College in a feature in the New York Times.

local citizen did not deter President Miller from admitting a Japanese American student at a time when Pearl Harbor was still uppermost in the minds

As a result of President Miller's vision, ingenuity, and courage which brought foreign students to Mennonite colleges in 1946 Goshen alone served approximately 340 different students between 1946 and 1975 from 58 countries. Several other Mennonite colleges could report similar results.

Many of these students are now back home in responsible positions of leadership in education, church and government. A veteran missionary educator in East Africa says, "As I look around me here and see the contribution that Goshen has made in East Africa I am truly amazed. And the fact of the matter is we will never really be able to total up the consequences of their experience in Goshen, but it certainly was great." A number have served the national council of churches of their countries and several have given significant service to the World Council of Churches.

Thanks to President Miller's pioneering efforts, the campus today has a lively international student program. Indirectly, his efforts also paved the way for the unique Study-Service Trimester, launched in 1969 to provide every Goshen student with 14 weeks of overseas opportunity. Both make the campus and the larger community better prepared for the world of tomorrow.

Founding the nursing school

By Orpah B. Mosemann

The first class entered the school of nursing in 1950: (front, l. to r.) with Instructor Mildred Shoemaker Drudge are Leona Yoder Baker, Elnora Weaver Voth; (back) Florence Rheinheimer Harnish, Charlotte Hertzler Croyle, Margaret Brubacher Ashley, Lois Shank Musselman, Mary K. Souder, Ruth Beard.

Orpah Mosemann was the founding director of the School of Nursing in 1950 and served to retirement in 1971.

As I reflect on the development of the Goshen College School of Nursing, I see in the former President Ernest Miller a man of unusual vision, great courage and patient diplomacy.

The Mennonite Church had successfully operated a diploma program in nursing at La Junta, Colorado. However, due to changing trends in nursing education and the limited clinical facilities at Mennonite Hospital, continuation of this school was threatened by the accrediting agency. Even if this school could continue, Ernest Miller believed that there should be a program of nursing in the Midwest and it should be operated at collegiate level. To enhance the spiritual life of the student it was believed essential that the church own the hospital in which the student gain clinical experience.

A fund drive was undertaken by the Mennonite Board of Missions and $400,000 was raised. A plot of land was purchased but by 1945 it became apparent that $400,000 was not sufficient to build a hospital, let alone operate it. An appeal was made to the Elkhart County business community for additional funds but there was inadequate interest in contributing to a Mennonite hospital. But an invitation was extended to the college to use the existing facility, Elkhart General Hospital.

This was a dark hour in the history of nursing education at Goshen College. Miller did not fight the offer but proposed that consultants be brought in and that there be a judgment by an impartial body. This was done. The Hamilton Associates released its study in June 1948. It contained four major recommendations:

1) That Elkhart General Hospital be expanded.
2) That a new hospital be built in Goshen (the present one was a renovated dwelling).
3) That Goshen College establish a collegiate school of nursing utilizing the clinical facilities in the community.
4) That a county health department be established.

These recommendations have become a reality. But as one member of the hospital board put it — if it were not for the tact and diplomacy of Ernest Miller, the union between Goshen College and Elkhart General likely would not have taken place.

The first class of eight students received their B.S. in Nursing in 1953. Since then well over 600 graduates have been awarded the same degree.

Ernest Miller — a man of vision and enough courage and diplomacy to make visions realities. This is the man who gave leadership in establishing the first collegiate school of nursing in the Mennonite Church as well as in the state of Indiana.

The concern for student growth

By Atlee Beechy

Goshen College has always been a community of which students were an important part. Ernest E. Miller strongly reinforced this concept. In 1941 he described the purposes of the personnel program which was initiated and developed under his direction: "Goshen College recognizes its primary function to be that of serving the individual student, not only with reference to his intellectual capacity and achievement but also with reference to his moral and religious needs, his vocational aptitudes and skills, and his health and social relationships. Recognizing these needs the College seeks to emphasize the development of the student as a person and as a member of the social group and the Christian community."

The wholistic development of the student, Miller believed, came through maximizing all the learning potential in the formal instructional program and the

The key to doubling your gift dollars

If you work for one of the companies or a subsidiary in the list below, go to the company personnel office and get a matching gift form. Use it the next time you send a gift to Goshen College.

Your employer will double your gift by matching it dollar for dollar. It does not matter whether you ever studied at Goshen College. The point is: these companies and their subsidiaries want to support the colleges and universities that their employees want to support.

Some companies have gone even another step. If a company is starred (*) in the list below, it will match the gift of your spouse to a college or university. Your spouse need not be an employee. Also, your spouse need never to have studied at GC.

Giving through the Matching Gift Plan is promoted annually by Goshen College and many other colleges and universities in cooperation with the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, Washington, DC. The list below has been provided by the Council.

The Matching Gift Plan, in operation for a number of years, is especially important this year to help fight inflation. Doubling gift dollars for a college's operating expenses has, for many companies, been limited to gifts of employees who are alumni. However, this year, many companies have opened their Matching Gift Plan to all employees, regardless of college attendance.

Atlee Beechy, on the faculty since 1949, is coordinator of counseling services and professor of psychology.

total college experience, including student activities and the dormitory experiences. Spiritual growth, academic competence and learnings related to personal and social responsibility were important goals. These interrelated concepts became the foundation of the personnel program.

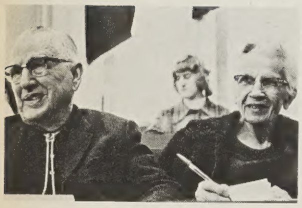
How was this vision carried out? Miller created staff positions and allocated more staff time and finances for the program. He initiated a faculty advising system, an orientation program for new students, more effective health services, an enlarged testing and records system, and a more visible program of personal, academic, occupational and religious counseling. Miller was concerned with student participation in Goshen College community government and the use of students in personnel services.

Goshen's development in personnel was recognized in the summary report by the 1941 North Central accrediting team: "The Personnel Services of Goshen College are administered with discrimination, prudence, and a great measure of wisdom. Student health service and the development of health service facilities are unusually good. The attitudes toward student discipline are educationally sound."

Ernest Miller made a significant contribution to the personnel program by developing a philosophy of personnel and organizing the needed program in line with his beliefs that students were important.

Purpose for living and learning

By Mary Royer



Never too old to go to school, Ernest and Ruth Miller took college courses and enjoyed them to the full in their retirement years. Ernest Miller retired from the faculty in 1962 after 23 years.

Mary Royer is professor of education. She joined the faculty in 1933.

Ernest Miller told a group of my teacher education students: "You can win illiterate people to faith in Christ; but to build a growing church you must teach them to read." A colleague from India said: "He worked hard to build a secondary school of excellence in India; but he never considered it an end in itself. His goal through the school was to build the church." This concept of the purpose of the school was integral in Ernest Miller's philosophy of Christian higher education also. He believed that schooling at any age should help individuals grow in wisdom and in favor with God and man.

He himself was at home with people of all ages and varied backgrounds. He grew up on a Midwest farm, taught and administered elementary and secondary schools in the American Midwest and Southwest and on the central plains and Himalayas of India. He earned a doctorate in a great metropolitan university where his adviser was the gracious scholar H. H. Horne, author of Jesus the Master Teacher. An authentic Christian educator Ernest Miller met prime ministers, college presidents, Pennsylvania Dutch farmers, little children, college freshmen, graduate students, men and women, with equal ease because he saw them as interesting and important people.

He believed that a liberal arts education should sensitize students to the needs and concerns of all people, well and ill, from early childhood to aging, locally and around the world; and that such an education should equip them with "Culture for Service." He expected the faculty to be able scholars, apt teachers, and friendly caring persons.

As president he authorized a study of the philosophy of Christian higher education which resulted in the concise two-paragraph statement by the faculty entitled "A Concept of Christian Higher Education at Goshen College." It reflects the quality and purpose of college education which he felt should combine faith and works, living and learning, word and deed so the educated person would be not an ivory-tower scholar but an able Christian learner sensitive to world needs and growingly ready to meet them for Jesus' sake.

The resulting programs his faculty worked on included those mentioned elsewhere in this Bulletin and others such as the following which predated and anticipated trends in public and private education. Before government provisions and public interest created pressures on higher education to regard women as co-responsible faculty colleagues, Ernest Miller encouraged women faculty members to secure doctoral degrees. He appointed a woman to chair a key faculty committee. He agreed to plan the education section of the 1948 Mennonite World Conference if he would be permitted to place a woman as a main speaker; and so a Goshen faculty woman became the first woman to serve on such a program.

Before the present community interest in older people crested, he helped organize a churchwide study conference on aging and involved faculty members both in planning the program and in studying ways to include this area in the college curriculum. When state universities were closing laboratory schools because of financial pressures and waning interest in experimental teaching of early childhood, he strongly supported the planning which made Goshen one of the very few Midwestern private colleges to have a children's school at the heart of the teacher education program; as a result, Goshen today is ready to meet the worldwide need for teachers of the very young and their families.

Ernest Miller's ambition for the church college was that it prepare youth to be, in the words of Daniel 1:3, "skilful in all wisdom, endowed with knowledge, understanding learning, and competent to serve."

Building Mennonite unity

In connection with Ernest Miller's initiative in finding an alternate to required military training, which is mentioned elsewhere in this Bulletin, the Council of Mennonite Colleges was founded in 1942. Charter members are Bethel, Bluffton, Freeman, Goshen, Hesston, Tabor and Messiah Bible. Members of the Council in 1975 include Canadian Mennonite, Conrad Grebel, Eastern Mennonite, and Pacific colleges in addition to the above.

In the beginning the Council conducted a Relief Workers Training School and educational courses for men in Civilian Public Service camps. But over the years the work of the Council expanded. The Council has sponsored conferences on Mennonite educational and cultural problems. In addition, in 1975 and for several prior recent years, it has been providing transcultural cooperative programs, open to students enrolled in member colleges or in colleges associated with the Brethren Colleges Abroad.

In consideration of outstanding contributions to the educational and religious work and activity of the Mennonite Church, Bethel College conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity on President Miller in 1952. Two of the closing paragraphs of the citation pointed out his efforts for inter-Mennonite unity and sharing:

". . . President Miller helped in organizing, and served as the first president of, the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges, an organization which has brought our Mennonite colleges together in active cooperation, . . . and which, in general, represents a step toward a united Mennonite Church.

"Reviewing these and other aspects of President Miller's life, it is evident . . . that he has made persistent and successful efforts at maintaining the uniqueness of our Mennonite tradition without sacrificing a perspective of worldwide service and responsibility, and that he has effectively promoted much-needed cooperation among the various branches of Mennonites. It is for these reasons, Mr. President, that the faculty and the board have seen fit to recommend President Miller for the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity."

If you want sun, fun and the ocean, join our Marine Biology Mini-Term

If you want to get more fun out of your vacations along seacoasts, you'll want to join GC's "Mini-Term in Marine Biology," May 19-24, in the Florida Keys.

The one-week "mini-term" requires only a lively interest in marine life and in group living. Participants will get a general understanding of the organisms of the ocean through lectures and by time spent in the ocean. You don't need to be a swimmer to learn about the ocean.

Instructors will be C. Franklin Bishop and Jonathan N. Roth, who have taught marine biology to GC students for eight years. The "mini-term" will be conducted at the Layton Marine Biology Station, a joint venture between GC and the town of Layton. The community is on U.S. 1 about 80 miles south of Miami and is on Long Key, a narrow key bordered by the Atlantic Ocean and Florida Bay.

The instructional fee is $80 a person. Applications will be accepted until April 15 or until all spaces are filled.

For more information or make your reservations, write or call C. F. Bishop or J. N. Roth, (219) 533-3161, Department of Biology, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

If you're in business, you're invited to the Small Business Management Seminar, June 6-7

"Small Business Management Seminar: Strategy and Technique" is being offered to all business persons June 6-7 on the GC campus.

Keynote address: "The Entrepreneur in Society," by Art Decio, chairman of the board, Skyline Corporation, Elkhart, IN.

Other topics: "Management by Objective for the Small Business," by Prof. Terry Hercus, faculty of administrative studies, University of Manitoba. . . . "Cash Flow Projections: A Decision Tool," by Michael A. Lang, C.P.A., Arthur Andersen & Company, Chicago, IL. . . . "Marketing Strategies for Small Business," by Dr. Peter S. Carusone, chairman of department of marketing, College of Business and Administration, Wright State University. . . . "Financial Sources and Strategies," by Robert J. Gastineau, assistant district director for management assistance, Small Business Administration, Indianapolis, IN.

Cost: $20 a person includes two luncheons and coffee service.

For reservations or more information: Rudolf Dyck, seminar chairman, Department of Business and Economics, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

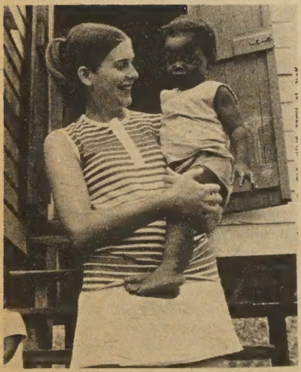
Come to Belize with us on a Mini-SST in 1976

By Vernon and Betty Schertz

Vernon and Betty Schertz initiated the SST program in Belize and directed the first three terms there. Vernon has taught at Goshen for 12 years, first in the English department but now more in the General Education area. Betty has devoted her time to the raising of five children, but is currently working on mastering Spanish and the art of grandmothering.



About the cover: Student Barbara Zehr discovers that a Belize toddler is as curious, mischievous and lovable as a toddler in the U.S.A. Homes, foods and schools may be different, but a child is a child. Photo by Harriet Metz.

Four years ago Belize was a mere name (British Honduras yet in 1971) on the Rand McNally map that we perused in order to locate the site of our upcoming Study-Service Trimester (SST) assignment. But now, Belize is a place where people — with names like Longsworth and Cain and Pepitune and Grant and Hyde — live and work and visit and worry and laugh and cry. It, too, is a place where we have close friends whom we would like to see again — and — would like to have you meet.

Which is what this article is all about. We discovered in our SST terms (we spent the spring term of '72 and the fall and winter terms of '73-'74 in Belize as SST leaders) a kind of education experience that we'd like to share. Students come home and talk about it; we go here and there to show our slides, but Belize and Peoria are still far apart. We want to bridge that gap by inviting those of you from Peoria or Hubbard or Archbold or Kalona to go along to Belize.

With that in mind, we will be leading a Mini-SST (mini only in terms of time — March 6-17, 1976) to Belize. We'd like to have you — SST parents, college alumni and friends — join us in some of the same experiences that students are involved in.

You will board a Taca jet at New Orleans on Saturday, March 6, 1976, and fly to Belize International Airport. We'll be there to meet you and escort you into Belize City where we will have accommodations in the same homes used by students.

A warm welcome

You'll get the same warm welcome from Mrs. Hyde (Auntie Ann), Mr. and Mrs. Longsworth (Alton and Iris), or Arthur, Una, and Stella as do the Goshen students. You will spend that first night getting acquainted with your new "parents" and then come to the SST center with the same puzzling questions as do the SSTers — "Do we eat everything they give us?" "How can I take a real bath when I must carry all the water upstairs?" "Is that a donkey I heard out my window?" "Where are the sidewalks?" "Are those really roosters crowing under my bedroom?" and on and on.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings we will have local speakers lecture to us about social, political and educational aspects of Belize. In the afternoons we will tour the city (probably on foot as we can walk, American pace, from side to side in 30 minutes) with Mr. Hertula, government housing director, or wander about the open air market, or watch Frank Lizama making coconut jewelry. We will mingle with the many, many people on foot, on bicycles, in donkey carts, in trucks and in cars as the old meets the new.

Mayan ruins and Old Colony Mennonites

The latter part of the week we will go into the back-country and climb Mayan ruins, visit Belmopan where you can take a picture of all the government buildings with one click of the shutter, and visit dignitaries with no more formality than a knock on the door. We will cross the Belize river on a hand-cranked ferry and emerge into the Pennsylvania Dutch atmosphere of the Old Colony Mennonites who operate the only dairy, the only hatchery, the only cereal factory, and the only feed mill in Belize, and finally walk across the Guatemalan border into the tiny village of Melchor with its colorful handwoven cloth for sale.

Over the weekend we will visit Caye Caulker where we can stay overnight in a fishing village and, if we are brave, take a trip out to the barrier reef to snorkle and see the fantastic underwater world of tropical coral and exotic fish — a Jacques Costeau special!

We will spend the last several days back in Belize City with host families or on projects that participants may want to undertake individually or in a small group, as a trip south to orange country and a Carib village or a trip north to cane country and a Mayan village.

A daily journal to record your experiences

Oh yes, if you are really to experience SST as a student there will be a daily journal — a record of your feelings and responses to different faces, different smells, different foods, and different time schedules. A final paper — well, we shouldn't overdo a good thing but . . . .

Come and join us in this attempt to capture a bit of the SST experience. The fee, based on 20 participants and current costs, has been set at $350 per person. This will cover air travel to and from Belize with New Orleans as port of departure, board and room in Belize and group travel about the country.
Just a final note. March, in Belize, is the time of sunshine, warm sea breezes and 80 degree temperatures. But it might get down to 75 degrees at night!

Artists of Mennonite heritage show works

Mennonite Artists Contemporary, Feb. 2 through March 16, was an exhibit of works by 50 artists "of Mennonite heritage who either hold a master's degree in studio art or make their living through the production of art." In connection with the show, a catalogue listing 54 artists (four artists listed in the catalogue were not able to submit a work for the show) was published, and is offered for sale elsewhere in the Bulletin.

The exhibit and catalogue, plus a conference for the artists the weekend of Jan. 31 - Feb. 2, fit into Goshen College's 450th anniversary celebration of the beginnings of the Anabaptist movement. Abner Hershberger '60 and Marvin Bartel, of the art department, were responsible for putting the events together.

Of the 54 artists in the show, 26 are GC alumni, former or current faculty, or otherwise related to GC. The alumni are:

James David Ashcraft '70, printmaker
Ron Birkey '59, architect
Jerry L. Bontrager '66, painter, printmaker

Weldon Pries, architect for the College, was also in the show.

The Mennonite Artists Contemporary registry and exhibition alerted the Mennonite constituency about its resources, observed Hershberger and Bartel. "It also lets young people know that there is a body of Mennonite artists in existence."

Beside the catalogue, the Goshen College art department has five slides of each artist's work. This collection (of about 250) will be available to interested persons, as also will be a slide collection of the show of 50 works.

The artistic integrity of 'Mennonite' art

By Dennis Adrian

Dennis Adrian, a graduate of U. of Chicago, teaches history of art at Illinois Institute of Technology and Roosevelt University and is an art critic for Chicago Daily News and Art in America. He is also a regular contributor to Art News, Art Forum, Art International and Print Collector's Newsletter. Among the exhibitions he has organized have been "Made in Chicago" (Museum of Contemporary Art), and shows for National Gallery of Canada, American Federation of Art and Illinois Arts Council. He is a former assistant curator of prints and drawings at Art Institute of Chicago.

The exhibition titled Mennonite Artists Contemporary at the Goshen College Art Gallery Feb. 2 through March 16 represented the testing and probing of a specific idea — whether there is a specifically identifiable Mennonite group of qualities and characteristics in the works of living North American Mennonite artists. This exhibition concept, developed and carried out by painter-printmaker Abner Hershberger, Goshen College's gallery director, is provocative. The general conception (or *mis*conception?) of the venerable tradition of the Anabaptist-Mennonite movement's attitude toward the visual arts has been one of gingerly wariness, perhaps arising out of a concern that a deep involvement with the sensory aspects of material things might be a diversion or distraction from the movement's spiritual focus.

Mr. Hershberger's fascinating effort demonstrates conclusively that modern Mennonite artists have come to feel (and have felt for some time) that any art, if it be understood as the revelation of the positive, productive activity of the human awareness, is an enhancement of and contribution to the spiritual basis and purpose of both the artist and the public.

This does not mean that Mennonite artists concern themselves with exclusively "spiritual" doctrinal or religious subject matter. Rather, the contemporary Mennonite community has for some time now regarded the visual arts as being as naturally and as properly integrated within Mennonite identity as music has been for more than four centuries. Beyond this generalization it is foolhardy to venture, but the point is an important one.

Exhibition included catalogue

The first rate catalogue for the exhibition (prepared by Mr. Hershberger, and made possible in part by the interest and generosity of the Schowalter Foundation) contains numerous statements by the artists included in the show. Their observations and reflections present a wide spectrum of attitudes about art, each as engrossing as it is revealing. While a number of artists confined themselves to technical summations and remarks about purely formal problems, quite a few express an attitude toward art which is humanistically inclusive. They reflect on their experiences of making and responding to works of art as a way to intensify human awareness in all its aspects, particularly with a respectful understanding of man in relation to the rest of creation.

Among those attending the artists conference preliminary to the opening of Mennonite Artists Contemporary was Ruth Carper '46 Eitzen. Her work appears in the lower third of the photo.

Correspondingly, an artist like Marvin Bartel, the ceramist, can speak of his own works coming to be formed to some extent in his mind while either "taking a leisurely bath" or "listening to the Sunday sermon." The artist's activity and identity is at one with the whole man. Another artist, the sculptor David Hostetler, states flatly, "There is a spiritual quality to everything," implying in the rest of his statement that his work and life are an attempt to become attuned to this spirituality.

To come right down to it, these artists' comments might have been made by creative people of any creed or spiritual persuasion. Also, the stylistic range to be seen in the paintings, prints, photographs, drawings, ceramics, sculptures, fabric pieces and what have you in the show is what might be found among any reasonably current artistic community in any part of the world.

Artists not limited to 'doctrinal' statements

What this means is that Mennonite artists, rather than narrowly attempting to use visual art as an illustrative tool for the dissemination of doctrinal positions, have chosen to pursue their individual and differing paths to artistic integrity as the best way to fulfil a deeply felt human responsibility.

Stylistically then the exhibition is eclectic and presents various modes of expression as well as all media. This is the general condition of serious contemporary art all over the world at present, and only in the most isolated or totalitarian areas can one find anything resembling a unified regional or national style. The show demonstrates that the polymorphous nature of international modern art transcends all but the most restrictive boundaries of ideological control, and further, that modern American art remains comfortably in the van of the international field.

Quality of show is high

In fact, the quality of the show is perhaps more uniformly high than the casual observer might have anticipated from the unusual thesis of Mr. Hershberger's selection basis. By this I mean that one might not only ask, "Is there such a thing as Mennonite art?" but just as easily "Will a group of works selected from artists who happen to have connection with the Mennonite tradition be especially interesting or good?" The answer to the first question would seem to be "Not especially, except in the sense that all art has a profound spiritual basis," and to the second it will be "Yes, decidedly."

Each viewer will no doubt choose favorites and I have many in the show. A partial list would include the ceramics of Marvin Bartel and John Klassen, the paintings of both Hershbergers, Abner and Ezra, those of Sylvia Bubalo and Stanley Kaufman, the photographs of Judith Gerber and Stephen Kreider, Orpha Hege's fiber pieces, and quite a few others.

This personal list is in no way exhaustive. I would hazard that those seeing the exhibition will soon give up the fruitless pastime of "which do I like best" and settle down to enjoy the variety and quality of the whole.

What is to be hoped is that there will be more exhibitions of this quality and ambitious scope. It can only be said that if the Mennonite Artists Contemporary is the initial manifestation of a lively and serious gallery program, then Goshen College and its art department have started off with very high standards indeed.

I feel Goshen as a whole gave me the basics which I needed later to build upon in graduate school. I did feel, though, because of (some) limited course offerings I did not have the background that other students had that graduated from state schools. But it didn't take me long to pick the information up after I reviewed and studied the textbooks they used. Goshen prepared me well for teaching.

I appreciate very much the emphasis at Goshen on the individual which has helped me to be a more "personal" teacher.

Throughout my graduate work I was continually thankful for the excellent undergrad training I received at Goshen College. I suggest that (GC) continue to demand quality work. . . . Along with this (GC) must convey to each (student) that "great things" are expected . . . instill the confidence that this kind of performance can be achieved.

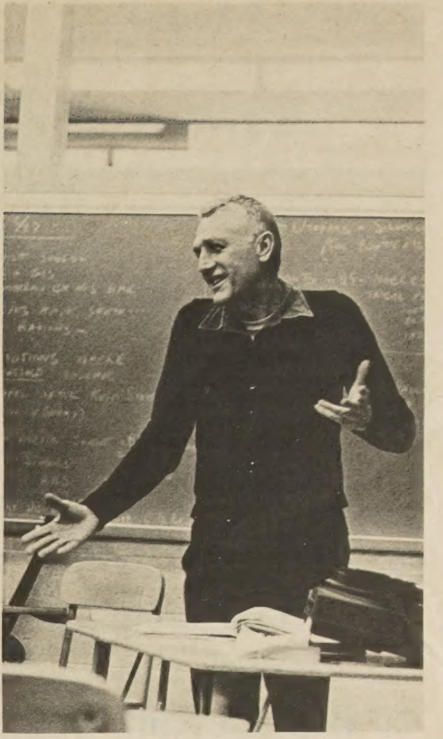
Nick's felt presence on the Goshen campus is more than the sum of even those significant parts suggested here. In profile the following selections point beyond themselves. The word is "yes."



A Nick Lindsay profile

Two psalms

As a bright eyed woman whose kiss is wine,
And the roof of her mouth is honey,
As a wind blown song, half heard
From across the marsh,
As a flower blooming in the pasture,
Unbidden,
So is God's word.

Racing, terrible
His word has come,
A whirlwind,
An uneasy tempest in a hot season
With evil augury;
Has come, laughter,
And the world trembles;
Earthquake, and the hills burst open,
The mountains are cast down in ruin,
The trees are but charred stumps.
They are burned with fire.

The bull

The bull penned in the college offices was a danger
an inconvenience, and he stank. They saw his hunger; they fed him oats and hay. They poked at him with finger-held yardsticks, watching, sometimes taking notes. His manure smeared all the tables. Secretaries cried and quit, but still they kept him, thinking him docile and tame to follow where they led. One day he raised his eyes; rage furrowed the hide across his neck; he swept his horns' bone yellow might from wall to wall and wrecked doors, chairs and chairmen.
Mute printed paper snowed on dust and broken bones. I met the bull in the streets and am called crippled. He destroyed the market place.
Some nigger children rode him that afternoon, with ribbons, bells and wooden beads around his neck, off toward the river. They paid their way with lead and cheap tin punchings at the toll bridge and are gone, so men have told me.

A wave

Who will build a house for the homeless sea?
The never-resting sea?
Who can call the waves by name? The innumerable waves.
Each form, formless;
Slapping, surging through many changes,
Laughing with bleak laughter,
Tumbling over one another with cannibal caress,
Homeless.

I was a carpenter of substance.
I built a house for the homeless sea.
The waves ate one another up and destroyed it.
I rushed among them with curses and entreaties
To save their house,
But they caressed me with festival laughter
And flung down the walls I had given them.
They lifted me up;
With my body they battered down the house.

I am become a wave,
Formless, never resting.
Who will build a house for the homeless sea?

From The Tree with the Broken Rim

N. Vachel Lindsay and son Nick, 1928, Spokane, Washington.

In 1962, in the fall, I was working carpentering for a two-bit contracting outfit in New York City — a dollar fifty an hour, seven children with us. I was going to Columbia University to get some Russian and carry it home where it seems to me we have use for it. Hard times and hungry; full of scorn against us for being southern and Christian. Robert Frost came through on what turned out to be his last public speaking tour and put on a show at Sarah Lawrence College. My cousins were there — president and president's wife — and between their suggesting and Frost's O.K., me and DuBose were invited. I'll always be grateful.

The show was directed to my father, Vachel Lindsay, and at me, somewhere in the audience, though we hadn't met Frost yet that day. He was squinting against the huge lights the Navy cameramen had set up to take their movies of this inexplicably national-security-interest person (it was just before his trip to Russia). Their apparatus elbowed the audience out of the way. They didn't say, "Cut, do that over for another shot," no. At least they didn't do that. Frost spoke, was not to be stopped, reached past the machinery to the audience and his fellow students of the early part of this century — Sandburg, Lindsay — his presence erasing all that machinery and the intervening decades, bringing all seventy years into a present there with us. Here's Lindsay giving Sandburg and Frost an assignment but himself the only one to write it (on the death of John L. Sullivan), V.L.'s arrogance — the values and limitations of arrogance, V.L.'s true blue insanity — the values of insanity when it's the real article, V.L.'s nobility.

After the show people met together to confess and receive benediction or curse from the prophet, drink liquor — it's called discuss over cocktails — while Frost ate scrambled eggs. It's an expensive gothic house, the president's residence. Ten thirty at night.

He's through with his eggs. He moves into the room. The people swirl around, dry leaves, electrical fear of the power of this aged elephant, his animal largeness, his fame, his terrible and justified ego. College presidents, ex-presidents, reporters, public relations men, deans and one thing and another twirl glasses, chat, chat, chat. I speak to him, meet him then finally. We shake hands.

"You, you're old. But you're strong, huh?"

(Chuckles) "I'm tough!"

"A lightwood knot."

"I'm tough!" (Anything worth saying is worth repeating.)

"When you spoke at the inauguration (Kennedy's) you said, 'This is a victory for the cause I represent.' What cause is that?"

"GOD." A huge voice. The chat chat in the room stops, the word jarring everyone, people mopping up spilled drinks. You take a big rock and drop it in a puddle and for a second you can see the bottom before the muddy wash comes back to cover all.

In making a poem — three labors: the impulse, the condensing form, the final revelation. The impulse — likely it's improper as a naked child saluting priests. Yeats said it was either lust or rage. The grace of art is that these griefs become redeemed praise.

From An Oral History of Edisto Island

Tony Deas and the present author started working together to gather up these re-tellings of Edisto Island's history in 1960. Tony is an elder in the Baptist Church and has been a leader who helped shape a sane policy in the Peter's Point community since the 1920's. He and his father before him were foremen for three generations of owners at Peter's Point plantation. Through him six other older citizens became involved in telling the old stories. By dint of taped recordings, notes and memory, a word-for-word transcription of each conversation was prepared, and then the various areas of each speaker's history identified — "The Storm of '93," "The Boll Weevil," "Going to School" — and all entries which related to each particular area were arranged together. The third step was to translate into more or less standard American the sentences which were often spoken in a language strongly influenced by Gullah. This procedure is full of pitfalls. As Sam Gadsden says, the speaker couldn't have said it any better than the way he did. Often the two languages don't fully overlap and nuances which bring in a mature humor or compassionate satire or sympathy are lost. We must beg mercy for these shortcomings. The translation has been undertaken in order that full attention could be paid to the substantial thought of the speakers.

We began this work after the storm of '59. Hurricane Gracie was severe: the wind instrument on the beach carried away after registering 145 miles per hour. The clean-up was laborious and while the working people worked, the insurance companies circled disconsolately like buzzards balked of their carrion. They were concerned with small print, words, clauses and dollars. But a carpenter's business is with hammer, nails, saw, the luck or God's grace that brings him through the day ready for tomorrow's work unbroken and untorn no matter how high he's been up in the air or how heavy the labor. Dollars aren't his language, but material things, the things God created with His hands and sweat, not paper ideas of money value, deeds of ownership and abstractions like that.

It was a hard time and demanded about a seventy hour work week all that year from island craftsmen. The griefs of the time, the observable fact that men who worked thirty hours a week or less, or who didn't work at all still increased their wealth and their capability for protecting their families whereas those who worked long hours were worse off and less able to protect their people, these matters, once fully perceived, seemed to hint that there must be some age other than the present or some co-existent world other than this one but nearly within reach of a man's senses where people dealt humanely with one another and rejoiced in their situation in the earth. A paradisal time is hinted in the narrative of each person who has undertaken a segment of the history of the old days and the old ways, and four of them, within their first hour's testimony, stated simply, "It is paradise," in speaking of the island of the older days.

By the time an unprejudiced observer looks closely at such a time, he finds it shot through with hard circumstances. The golden age seems not so much a matter of experience as of vision and intention on the part of the speaker. Were it to be summed up in a slogan, it might be, "There is a defenselessness which is victorious."

Nick, DuBose and Karen at home on "The Mischief," a 30-ft. sloop, Berkeley Yacht Harbor, California, December, 1946.

A fat sermon

Did you ever wonder how the Lord God Almighty
Took it into His head to make a mosquito
That makes you to have malaria
and gives you hell in the night?
Done it though, made the whole crop.
But then He took and made the frog,
And the long tongue toad to eat them up.
Yes, and get fat too.

Did you ever wonder how the Lord of darkness and light
Took it into His head to make poison ivy
That bloats you sick
and gives you hell in the night?
Done it though, His leafy job.
But then He took and made the hog,
And the long tongue goat to eat it up.
Yes, and get fat too.

Did you ever wonder how God of the golden sun
Took it into His head to create money
Which, the greed for it tumbles you to hell,
amen?
Done it though, His golden skill.
But then He made the antidote:
Made the long tongue rich to hog it all.
Yes, and get fat too.

But every once in a while there's stuff that comes in on you. All of a sudden something falls into place. Suppose you're driving an eight-penny galvanized finishing nail into this siding. Your whole universe is rolled onto the head of that nail. Each lick is sufficient to justify your life. You say, "Okay, I'm not trying to get this nail out of the way so I can get onto something important. There's nothing more important. It's right there." And it goes — pow! It's not getting that nail in that's in your mind. It's hitting it — hitting it square, hitting it straight. Getting it now. That one lick.

The 1975 alumni ballot for the executive board

The Executive Board. The Alumni Association of Goshen College was founded in 1901. For many years the business of the Association was transacted by a board of directors of 18 members, six elected each year for a three-year term. However, because of distance that had to be traveled by board members, meetings were often not well attended. From 1929 to 1967, for example, there was only one meeting (December, 1944) at which all the directors were present. In 1967-68 the constitution was revised and the by-laws amended to replace the Board of Directors with an Executive Board of 12 members plus the director of alumni relations, who is executive secretary of the Alumni Association ex officio, to conduct the business of the Association between the annual meetings on Alumni Day.

In accordance with the revised constitution, there is an election of members to the Executive Board every year. This election is conducted by mail ballot. Every alumnus is eligible to vote.

The Executive Board meets an average of four times a year, usually on a Saturday morning. It names the working committees of the Association, determines the Association's major policies and activities for the year and reviews actions and programs in process. In recent years all Board meetings have been on the Goshen campus.

Executive Board members receive no compensation for their services other than reimbursement of expenses. The term of each member is two years. A board member may hold two consecutive terms. The exception is the president-elect, who is elected in odd-numbered years, and serves two years as president-elect, two years as president, followed by two years as past president — a total of six years.

How Board nominees are chosen and members elected. Each year a Nominating Committee is named by the Executive Board to choose nominees for the positions on the Executive Board that need to be filled. About twice as many nominees as there are positions to be filled are named. The Nominating Committee obtains the approval of each nominee before the name is allowed to go on the ballot. The nominees, and biographical data about each one, are listed on this page and the facing one, and on the ballot.

To vote in the election, you merely fill in the ballot which is pre-addressed for your convenience. Because the ballot also contains reservation information for the Annual Alumni Banquet, the reservation form is separated immediately upon receipt to preserve anonymity. Your ballot must reach the Alumni Office by June 13, 1975, if it is to be counted. However, if you are reserving a plate(s) for the Annual Alumni Banquet, it must be received by June 5, 1975. The results of the election will be announced at the annual meeting of the Association, Saturday evening, June 14.

Executive Board members to continue throughout the 1975-76 year:

Leanne Fricke Schertz '58,
president, Peoria, IL . . . . Term expires 1979

In GC alumni activities he has been a class agent in the annual fund.

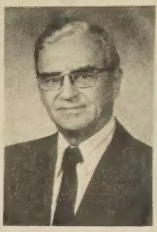
school and summer Bible school, and been in a host of other church assignments as well as in PTA leadership.

Elizabeth's husband is Ralph '41. They have two sons and a daughter. In GC alumni activities, Elizabeth and Ralph have been active in regional club and class reunion meetings, and were members of the first alumni Mini-SST to Haiti.

Executive board nominees; vote for one in each pair

1st pair

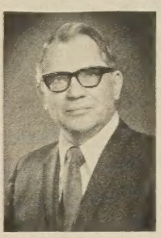
Orin B. Beechy '37, Wooster, OH, has been driver education instructor in the Wooster city schools for 18 years and an insurance agent. He received the master's from Kent State U. and has received a community award for 30 years in education plus various awards for life insurance work. Church and community activities have included president of Wooster Education Association, involvement in PTA, Sunday-school teacher, superintendent, Bible school, and church council. He is married to the former Marie Ramseyer '40, and they have three daughters. In GC alumni activities he has helped with fund-raising.



Paton Yoder '35, Canton, OH, is chairman of the division of social sciences and professor of history at Malone College, and author of Inns of the Early Midwest, published in 1969. He is a former faculty member of Hesston College, Westmont College, and of GC, for which he and Mrs. Yoder were SST leaders in Haiti 1970-71. He is a Ph.D. graduate of Indiana U. He is active in the First Mennonite Church of Canton and its outreach program to the community. Mrs. Yoder is the former Hazel Smucker '39. They have three sons and two daughters.

2nd pair

Miriam Stalter Charles '41, Goshen, IN, writes that although she is currently part-time secretary at Mennonite Board of Congregational Ministries, "my present title is homemaker and I have been at this job 28 years and thoroughly enjoyed it." Other employment has been as part-time instructor at GC and as secretary in various college offices. Miriam accompanied her husband, Howard, on two overseas service assignments for the Mennonite Board of Missions — Japan, 1961-62, and Ghana, 1973-74. Among her church and community activities are Sunday-school teaching, education commission, church council, WMSC council, executive committee of Church Women United of Goshen. Miriam and Howard have two sons.



Royce A. Engle '42, Spencerville, OH, is manager, marketing training, for Avco New Idea Farm Equipment Company. Earlier he was manager of a farm equipment dealership and field sales manager for a Ford tractor distributor. Current church activities are Sunday-school teacher and assistant church chorister, but earlier activities in church and community have been Sunday-school superintendent, church council, Lions Club, PTA and Band Parents. Royce is married to the former Doris Stuckey '41. They have three sons and two daughters. In GC alumni activities Royce has been a class agent.

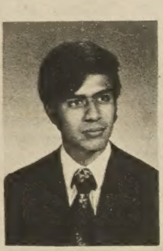
3rd pair

Mark E. Conrad '60, Erie, PA, has been a manager for Travelers Insurance Company in South Bend and Fort Wayne, IN; now is in Erie. In 1969 he was designated Charter Life Underwriter (CLU) by the American College Life Underwriters. At Lakewood United Methodist Church he is on the finance committee, and he has also been involved in National Management Council. Mrs. Conrad is the former Nancy L. Gerber '60. The Conrads have two daughters and a son. In current GC activities, Mark is a class agent in the Alumni Fund.

Joe D. Yoder '52, West Jefferson, OH, has been a farmer for 22 years and during that time has been involved with the health board, Soil and Water Conservation and Farm Bureau Federation. After GC, he studied further at Ohio State College of Agriculture. He has been involved in numerous church activities including Sunday-school teacher and superintendent and church council. Joe is married to the former Jean Greider, and they have three sons and a daughter. In GC alumni activities he has been a part of the phonothon effort of the annual fund. He adds, "Would like to help make GC continually better in appreciation for her contribution to me and our family."

4th pair

He has received the master's in education with specialization in counseling from Oregon College of Education. In church activities he is MYF sponsor and assistant church chorister. Mrs. Beechy is the former Claudia Chupp '69. In alumni activities John has been a class agent in the annual fund for two years.



Mario Bustos Jr. '73, Goshen, IN, is currently a student at Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Elkhart, and active in the local Spanish Mennonite Church, "La Iglesia del Buen Pastor." Mario is married to the former Shirley Handrich '72.

Keeping up with the faculty

This article is not all-inclusive of faculty activity. For instance, because of space limitations, addresses, speeches, and presentations for community groups are not listed. Neither are sermons nor presentations for congregations here. There is a vast number of faculty appointments with church and community as well as faculty attendance at professional meetings, but the list is simply too long to list all the detail. For convenience of alumni readers, years of service appear in parentheses after each faculty person's name.

Kathryn Aschliman '54 (1962-), assistant professor of education, is on a sabbatical leave extending through the spring trimester to work on early childhood education through Union Graduate School, Antioch College.

Marvin Bartel (1970-), associate professor of art, had a one-man show at Wilmington College last November and December and was one of 10 invited potters to exhibit works in Moreau Gallery of St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, IN, last November.

Editor of folk tales book

Ervin Beck '59 (1967-), associate professor of English, has edited Folk Stories from Belize: "We just catch um," a gathering of eight folk tales from the Central American country known as British Honduras until a few years ago. The book, intended for GC's international literature class, sold out

9:00 a.m. Alumni Association of Goshen College Board of Directors Meeting, Arts 109. The Board of Directors, since 1968, comprises the Executive Board and the presidents of all regional clubs.

9:00 a.m. - 12 noon. College bookstore is open.

The bookstore will be open Saturday morning as a special service to alumni. If you are interested in GC athletic shirts, jackets, mugs, or books, etc., stop in before or after the campus tours.

10:00 - 11:30 a.m. Campus Tours

Tour groups will organize with guides in the Snackshop of the Union to get acquainted with the campus as it is today. Among the campus points to be visited are: Ceramics Studio, the Turner Precision X-ray Laboratory, the Mennonite Historical Library, the Art Gallery with the annual student exhibition and the Electronic Piano Teaching Laboratory. Questions and discussion will be an important part of the tour.

12:00 noon Class Reunions

Special note: This invitation is open from all classes. You are welcome and invited to the reunion of the class you identify most closely with.

For example, suppose you started with one class, then interrupted college and returned much later to be graduated. You are still most welcome at the reunion of the class you started with, even though you were graduated with another class and may not have received an invitation to the reunion from the class you started college with.

If you will notify the Alumni Office of the class you wish to be identified with, the records will be adjusted so you will receive future mailings.

Six alumni at Adriel

Arizonans write ballad

New words expressing sentiment about leaving GC have been composed for an old barbershop quartet tune. The composers are Jake Rittenhouse '64, Theron J. Weldy '56, David W. Mann '53 and Steve D. Miller '65, all of Phoenix, AZ, who premiered their "Ballad of Separation" at the alumni regional club meeting in Phoenix on December 7. The words, sung to the traditional "Good Night, Ladies," are:

Good-bye Goshen,
Good-bye Millers,
Good-bye Burkholders
We're going to go out west.

Good-bye Maple Leafs,
Good-bye Bachmans,
Good-bye Hershbergers,
We're off to spread the Word.

Merrily we move out west,
get a job, raise our kids,
Prayerfully we start a church,
sharing Menno's faith.
Heartily we welcome you
to know the great Southwest.

Verna M. Zimmerman '45 (1951-), associate professor of nursing, interim director of the division of nursing for 3 1/2 years, was honored at a surprise party last December and presented with a book of letters from alumnae of the nursing division. Miss Zimmerman is on a sabbatical leave in 1975 and will be visiting Mennonite medical programs in Africa and Asia.

Five decades of home economics grads report back

Last November Catherine Mumaw and Olive Wyse, of the home economics faculty, conducted a survey of all home economics alumnae. A one-page form was sent to 320 graduates who were home economics majors. As the Bulletin went to press, 160 forms had been returned.

Because of the variety of information that the alumnae provided, Dr. Mumaw made portions of the forms available for summary in the Bulletin. Reprinting the information puts former students in touch with each other, as well as shows the steady stream of home economists GC has provided for service to society and the world.

In addition to what is summarized in the columns that follow, many alumnae shared their personal vision and the opportunities they face in applying home economics principles and concepts to a world confronted by population growth, food shortages, nutritional deficiencies and lack of knowledge on how to allocate the world's resources for the benefit of all. Many alumnae also offered constructive comments on GC's home economics program from their vantage point of several years in the profession.

To those alumnae who have not yet returned their questionnaires, it isn't too late.

But do it now. Send them to Dr. Catherine Mumaw, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

Alumni piano teachers are welcome at June workshop

Elvina Truman Pearce, back at GC by popular demand, is guest instructor for the piano teachers workshop.

A five-day workshop for piano teachers with guest instructor Elvina Truman Pearce, nationally known lecturer in piano pedagogy, will be on campus June 23-27. The workshop has dual foci: (1) to explore the steps involved in preparation for performance of intermediate to advanced repertoire, directed by Mrs. Pearce, and (2) to emphasize the development of musicianship, reading skills, memory and technic in the elementary student, directed by John O'Brien.

Mrs. Pearce, who is returning for the 1975 workshop by popular demand of 1974 workshoppers, is a member of the North Central College piano department and an independent piano teacher for pre-college students. She is a recitalist and solo performer with such orchestras as the Chicago Symphony and has conducted workshops in more than 40 states and Canada. She is a former associate of Frances Clark as supervisor of piano instruction.

Also on the workshop faculty is John O'Brien, associate professor of music and piano pedagogy at GC and former head of the elementary department and director of teacher training at the New School for Music Study, Princeton, NJ. In addition to his subject, "The Elementary Student," Mr. O'Brien will conduct technic classes for teachers wishing further instruction in the application of technical principles to the keyboard.

Kathryn Sherer, piano teacher at GC and former director of GC's piano preparatory department, will give a lecture-recital of new teaching materials. Doyle Preheim, associate professor of music at GC and director of the Chamber Choir, will lecture on "Accompanying from the Singer's Point of View."

Veronica Roth, director of GC's piano preparatory department, will direct the student program of the workshop. Only students of the participating teachers may apply for this specially supervised program. Details will be sent on request.

The workshop will be held in Assembly Hall. Tuition for the teachers is $80 and college credit is available, if desired. Tuition for their students is $30. Room and board is $35 a person.

More information is available from Piano Pedagogy Department, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

Mennonite Artists Contemporary 1975 on sale

The book catalogues 54 current Mennonite artists of North America. Most of them were represented at Goshen College February 2 to March 16 in the Mennonite Artists Contemporary 1975 exhibition, which was considered the first exhibit of its kind.

For each of the 54 names listed, the catalogue gives the present location of the artist, notes the medium in which he or she works, childhood origin (11 states, two provinces and three overseas countries are represented), education, art-related jobs, list of professional exhibitions (juried and one-person), what publications have reviewed the artist's work, plus a brief statement by the artist on his or her own philosophy. It also reproduces a black-and-white photo of one piece of the artist's work.

Published February, 1975. $5.00 postpaid. Order from Goshen College Bookstore, Goshen, IN 46526.

A towering figure and gentle person

By Robert W. Conrad, editor, writing in The Goshen News, February 25, 1975

Pen-and-ink drawing of S. C. Yoder by Oliver W. Shenk, reproduced from the 1926 Maple Leaf.

He was a towering figure, a very gentle person and never harsh. Everybody loved him. His spirit was marvelous. He was a real saint. These were some of the words used by J. Lawrence Burkholder, Goshen College president, as he told us about Sanford C. Yoder.

Mr. Yoder, the seventh president of Goshen College, died Sunday (Feb. 23, 1975) and his funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday (Feb. 26) at the College Mennonite Church.

"S. C. Yoder deserved much credit for the survival of Goshen College at a critical period in its history. Not only was he able to gain the confidence of many people at a time when higher education was distrusted, but he also provided leadership during the Depression.

"He held the college together when many students had no money to pay tuition and there was no money to pay the faculty. Lesser spirits would have given up. Above all he was a man of faith who believed in the goodness of God and the trustworthiness of his friends and colleagues," Burkholder added.

Mr. Yoder made a great contribution to his church and to this community back in August of 1923 when he accepted the challenge of reopening Goshen College for the 1924-25 school year, serving as president. It was a difficult period because the church had closed the college for the 1923-24 year due to major controversy and lack of confidence.

Mr. Yoder's task was that of peacemaker. He immediately began to unite the church and the college and was able to build confidence of the denomination in the Goshen institution during the 17 years he served as president.

These were difficult years because of the Depression but student enrollment grew from 70 in 1924 to 326 in 1939. Buildings were constructed and the faculty was expanded as he laid the groundwork for accreditation, a milestone reached by his successor as president, the late Ernest E. Miller, who died Jan. 11.

In his later years Mr. Yoder enjoyed reminiscing of his early years as a pioneer resident on the Iowa prairie and as a horseback riding homesteader in the state of Washington. Those may have been more challenging years than his revival of Goshen College.

Mr. Yoder's experiences during his lifetime were vast. He experienced difficult times and great success and was a kind and gentle man through it all. He received many honors for his accomplishments from a variety of organizations.

In a history of Goshen College published in 1954, John Umble, in citing the accomplishments of Mr. Yoder, stated that "he was more than a builder of buildings and a leader of educators. He was a maker of friends. For his unselfish friendship and his Christian integrity the students have given him an enviable place in their hearts."

When GC's first professorship was established in Mr. Yoder's honor in 1970, the text of his citation was "Sanford C. Yoder has been a prophetic voice in the Mennonite Church. In every role — college president, professor, counselor, conference moderator, bishop, pastor, evangelist, author, public speaker, mission board executive and mediator — he has stalwartly upheld the life, faith and heritage of the Christian church. His first goals have always been to inspire abiding loyalty to Jesus Christ and to instruct by precept and example the true meaning of Christian discipleship. The Sanford Calvin Yoder Professorship in Christian Life and Service is a tribute to his fine spirit and dedication to the total cause of Christian higher education."

Mr. Yoder enjoyed life and he made a contribution to society wherever he lived. His denomination and the entire community is fortunate that his life approached a full century. As Burkholder said, he was the greatest.

His spirit lives on

By Robert W. Schnuck, editorial page editor, writing in The Elkhart Truth, February 27, 1975

The survival and advancement of Goshen College as an important Elkhart County asset are due in no small measure to Sanford C. Yoder, seventh president of the college, who died at 95 Sunday.

The college had closed for the 1923-24 year due to internal difficulties. Yoder then became president. As noted by the current president, J. Lawrence Burkholder, Yoder held the college together when many students had no money to pay tuition and there was no money to pay faculty. He was able to unite the church and the college, which grew both in enrollment and in physical plant during his 17 years of leadership.

Yoder wrote seven books, was a member of the Mennonite Board of Education and was bishop of the College Church for 14 years. Above all he was loved and respected for his gentle, kind nature and for his enduring accomplishments for his church, college and the community. His spirit lives on in the inspiration he gave.

Educator, churchman, missions promoter, rancher, author

By Melvin Gingerich

Melvin Gingerich, a 1926 graduate of Goshen College, is a former GC professor of history, former director of research of Mennonite Research Foundation and archivist emeritus of the Mennonite Church Historical Committee.

On Nov. 12, 1916, S. C. Yoder baptized an unusually large class of young people living in the Kalona, Iowa, community. I was a member of that class. From that date until his death, in Iowa, Kansas, and in Indiana I had many contacts with him. From these associations has come the picture of an unusual man, who has towered above many of us not only physically but also in other noteworthy ways.

First one thinks of his contribution as an educator, for the time that he devoted to Goshen College as its president and as a teacher occupied the major block of time during his most active years. It may well be the judgment of history that President Yoder's greatest contribution was to gather an able, loyal, dedicated faculty who remained with the school not only during its reorganization years but continued to serve Goshen College and the church in the years that followed.

He was also a church statesman, working first in the Western District Amish Mennonite Conference. He expressed deep gratitude for the older leaders in this conference. They instilled in him heartfelt respect for and devotion to the denomination that later elected him to serve on its leading committees and in its highest offices. A man of moderation, of deep humility, and of sincere friendliness, growing out of his interest in persons, he was a respected leader not only among his brethren but also among students, neighbors, and townsmen.

He also had an abiding interest in Christian missions. It is not surprising that in his autobiography The Days of My Years he devoted a major chapter to "My Work on the Mission Board." As secretary of the Mennonite Board of Missions for many years, he brought an open mind, an understanding spirit, and a global approach to the expanding missionary program of his denomination.

A son of the soil, S. C. Yoder had been a farmer and a rancher. To read his firsthand experiences in his Horse Trails Along the Desert is a rich treat. He was also a scholar of the Bible and a historian. Poetry of the Old Testament and He Gave Some Prophets reflect his deep insights into the meaning of the Bible message. His book For Conscience Sake is a valuable historical study of Mennonite migrations "for conscience sake."

In his sermons he made Bible stories become exciting and relevant. Recently when I read sermons and addresses from his Things That Remain, I was captivated by their construction, clarity, their use of apt phrases, picturesque descriptions, and the poetic quality of the sentences. His travel books abound in quotable portions. Dignity, simplicity, imagination characterize his literary style. He was indeed a literary craftsman whose books will long continue to bring joy and inspiration to their readers.

An example of Christian fortitude

By Olive G. Wyse

Olive G. Wyse, professor of home economics, joined the Goshen College faculty in 1926 under the presidency of S. C. Yoder.

On a wintry evening, Dec. 5, 1925, a group of students walked to 1119 South Eighth Street to surprise President Yoder by singing for his birthday. He received us warmly and graciously. We even learned how old he was — 46. On Dec. 5, 1974, when I took a plate of Christmas cookies to his Greencroft room and congratulated him on his 95 years, he responded in his usual friendly manner. He contrasted his feeling about aging now with how he and his twin brother regarded birthdays and growing older in their childhood. This was my last conversation with the tall preacher I learned to know as "Brother Sanford" in Iowa before he became President Yoder.

A few days after this visit I received a Christmas greeting from him addressed in his own hand, a symbol of his thoughtfulness. His interest in people, his readiness to share of himself and to identify with the concerns of others, made students his friends. They felt he cared for them as persons.

It was not my privilege to take one of his courses, but his reading and interpretations of Psalms and Job in chapel made many passages come alive for me. His unusual ability to empathize with the poets enabled him to communicate their message.

During his college presidency he was also secretary of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities. As a consequence, the college community was always aware of the mission outreach of the church. Mission Board meeting programs were on the official bulletin board weeks in advance. Home and overseas mission workers were brought to the campus to speak. One of the tangible results of his emphasis on missions was the student interest in establishing Sunday schools in north and east Goshen. These student-initiated programs eventuated in the well-established congregations in these areas.

Another outstanding strength of Sanford C. Yoder was his ability to take criticism from the brethren in the church without becoming bitter or resorting to retaliation. He often said people could criticize what he did but when they attributed wrong motives to his actions they were going too far. In a time when there was much division in the brotherhood he exercised the healing arts of a peacemaker. His faith and courage in difficult times helped preserve Goshen College and gave many of us encouragement to hold fast the faith that was committed to us. I am grateful for his example of Christian fortitude, grace and loving-kindness.

The Bible came alive in his teaching

By J. C. Wenger

J. C. Wenger, professor of historical theology at Goshen Biblical Seminary, has taught college and seminary Bible courses since 1938. He joined the faculty under the presidency of S. C. Yoder.

S. C. Yoder, in the 1946 picture above, was on the full-time teaching faculty until 1951. Cover picture was taken in 1963.

About the time I finished high school a tall, slender Lincolnesque figure appeared one Sunday morning in the Blooming Glen, Pennsylvania, Mennonite congregation where I was then a member. He preached a moving sermon on the poetic words of David's country friend whom he had invited to come live in the capitol city of the Hebrews. In declining, Barzillai asked rhetorically:

> "Can I hear any more the voice > of singing men and singing women?"
> (2 Sam. 19:35)

As was the custom in those days it was announced at the close of the service that the brother who brought the message was Sanford C. Yoder. "S.C." had himself grown up in rural Iowa, and evidently identified deeply with the poetic words of Barzillai. Indeed, as I sat under President Yoder's eloquent sermons during my junior and senior years at Goshen College I was always inspired by his beautiful discourses. In many of his sermons S. C. identified deeply with the biblical writer, especially with the poetical portions of the Old Testament, and — like Lincoln — when his emotions were touched S. C.'s prose took on the cadence of poetry as he preached. His was a formative influence on my heart and soul.

When I was about two years from the doctorate he began to correspond occasionally with me, and eventually invited me to join the faculty as a teacher of Bible. I served under him during the last few years of his presidency and for many years as his younger colleague in the Bible school and seminary.

Few indeed are the leaders who could have brought a college faculty intact through the rigors of the awful depression of the 1930s. At times the faculty were being paid in cash about a dollar a day. The treasurer of the Board of Education told me later that the appeals of faculty members for needed cash were so heart-rending that he used to weep on his pillow at night. But somehow S.C. made each faculty and staff member feel so needed and appreciated that they stuck to their posts.

Sanford Yoder had a great heart. He loved people. He was compassionate and understanding. And somehow his personal acquaintance with God was so vital and intimate that its force was felt by his students as well as his Sunday audiences. The Bible seemed to come alive in his teaching and preaching and the biblical writers were seen in a new way as human beings who had the same nature as we, and who had a message of faith and obedience for us.

S. C. knew also that like all of us he was approved of God only through the merits of Christ. On one occasion he anticipated in a testimony how he expected to react when he realized that he was entering the Valley of the Shadow. "I shall," he said with a voice tremulous with emotion, "lean hard on the grace of God — for that's all I have."

Sanford Calvin Yoder has now passed through that valley into the many mansions of the Glory World.

An odd way to get a name

By J. C. Wenger

One of the most influential leaders among the Mennonites was S. C. Yoder. He was born to Christian Yoder and his wife Anna Swartzendruber in Iowa on Dec. 5, 1879. He had a twin brother Samuel, who died as a youth. The Yoders were of the Amish faith. Nevertheless, Sanford went to high school at Clarion, Iowa.

It was always a puzzle how an Amish baby could have been given a name like Sanford Calvin. One day he told me the story. He had no middle name. When he graduated from high school each graduate was told to write his name on the blackboard. The other students had three names. His stood there simply as Sanford Yoder. One of the more lively girls in the class went to the board and made it read, Sanford Calvin Yoder. He allowed it to stand, his diploma so read, and so was known throughout his life. — From The Mennonite Reporter.

I thank God that Barb could come into my life

By Becky Troyer, a former roommate

I first learned to know Barb at Hesston College almost four years ago. I learned to know her best when we both played on the same softball team. She gave 100 percent effort to the team, added a lot of spirit and wanted persons to know how much she cared about them.

This past year I lived in a house off campus with Barb along with Gayle Troyer, Debbie Davis and Carol Birky. I can still remember all the good times we had in that house: our discussions around the table after supper, how Barb always seemed to have the right words when someone needed to talk to her, her interests in everyone's life.

When I think of Barb, I think of someone who was always smiling and cheerful. Her big brown eyes were so expressive and said "I care about you." She always had time to stop and talk and let you know that she was ready to listen if you needed to talk. She was a very dedicated person, ready to lend a helping hand — and I think that's why she chose a career as a social worker. She enjoyed her classes and especially her field work.

I remember those cold winter days when she missed me coming home from work and she would have to walk home. She would come in the house with her coat wrapped around her, her hat and her scarf and that cold, little red nose. She never complained even though she had missed me. And then there were those times when I'd go to my car at 5:00 and she'd be there smiling. I had had a hard day at work and she'd say "Hi" and start talking about her day. All of a sudden my day didn't seem so depressing; it didn't seem like I had really worked that hard.

I'm sure her years at Goshen were the happiest of her life. She enjoyed her classes and all the people she met here. And it seemed like people always knew who Barb was.

We got a letter from her this past Friday (May 23) and she told us how much she was enjoying her SST unit. It was mostly what she expected and that she had prepared herself pretty much for the culture shock and all that goes with that. Her family were parents in their 30's and they had a 3-year-old daughter. She really didn't think of them as parents. It was nice to have some persons almost her age. They communicated really well. There were also lots of relatives — grandparents, aunts and uncles and cousins around there. It was one big happy family and she really liked that.

In closing her letter she mentioned some everyday struggles that she was going through, but she was happy. She was thankful she had God on her side. She had said so often how God always seems to find an answer for the many questions about life she had. She was always willing to turn everything over to Him and to let Him take control of her life. Barb was a dedicated Christian, ready to tell anyone how God had helped in her life.

She was a beautiful person. She had a lot of influence on my life and I thank God she could come into my life.

Becky Troyer, a secretary in the personnel office, has been on GC's staff since 1973.

In celebration of Barbara Roeschley's life

By Bradley Yoder, Barb's academic counselor

Barbara Ann Roeschley, 21, died in a drowning accident in the Pacific Ocean at Quepos, Costa Rica, on May 25, 1975. The tragedy happened near the close of a field trip of the Study-Service Trimester (SST) unit of which she was a member. Barbara was a senior and SST was her final requirement in completing her work for the B.A. degree.

During the past two years I have had the privilege of being Barbara Roeschley's academic counselor, and we have had three courses together. I count it a privilege, though a difficult privilege, to share some of my thoughts in celebration of her life. Much of what I write here will be her own words, quoted from materials she wrote in connection with some of her social work courses.

Of all the many things one could say about Barb, I would like to focus briefly on three dimensions of her life as I saw it: (1) her wanting to grow through persons whose background, abilities and experiences were different from her own, (2) her courage and (3) her gratitude.

First, her desire to grow through new experiences. There is a kind of irony about her death coming while she was on the Study-Service Trimester in Costa Rica. This isn't the first time she was in new territory. Her interests previously led her to live with a Spanish-American family in south Texas, to the inner-city of St. Louis, to a summer in Bolivia, to a day camp for the mentally retarded and physically handicapped, to work with the aged, to Bashor Home, Goshen, and Aux Chandelles, Elkhart; also to Logan Center (for the retarded), South Bend, where she had her social work field instruction this past year. In reflecting on her past, Barb said,

> I grew up in a small mid-western town where the majority of the people are white, middle-class and Protestant. I want to understand and appreciate all the good things about that, but I don't want that to be the limit of my horizons.

Second, I'd like to focus on her courage. I suspect many people weren't fully aware of this in her. Paul Tillich in his book, The Courage to Be, discusses three kinds of anxiety which he says are part of our human situation. He says that to be fully human, we must recognize these anxieties in ourselves, accept them as part of the center of our being, and say "Yes" to life in spite of these anxieties. I'd like to illustrate how I saw Barb demonstrating her courage.

Tillich speaks of the courage needed to overcome the anxiety of guilt — guilt that comes at those times when we realize that our thoughts, feelings and actions are not measuring up to what we want them to be. Barb struggled with this and I quote from one of her papers:

> Today I had another interview with John. He has a really sad life story. He has cerebral palsy and was involved in a serious accident when he was young which broke both his legs in two places. His parents have physically abused him and often excluded him from family activities, because they can't accept him as he is. He is 22 now. Since we have helped him find an apartment and gotten him into our training program, he's feeling that he has "escaped from his family," so to speak. I'm still very angry at his father. I've never seen someone in John's circumstances treated this badly before. I feel my anger changing though. I'm wanting now to understand why John's father needed to treat him that way. I seem to be on my way to making something positive out of it.

A second kind of courage is that which overcomes the anxiety of meaninglessness. At times Barb struggled with the question of meaning, especially when some of her clients faced injustice and lack of opportunity.

> There is such a difference between the retarded child and the retarded adult. The child is cute and cuddly and loveable, but when an adult still acts like a child and looks abnormal too, it is much harder to show that you are concerned. I knew of this difference before, but it's always easier to accept when you aren't really around adults. The truth can hit you kind of hard, even though you think you're prepared. It's hard to think that someday all those loveable children will become the adults we may find hard to accept. I'm really glad for the opportunity to work with adults even though it will take more effort and more love, I think. I must admit that I still have some fear, but I'm excited and I'm anticipating this new experience.

The final kind of courage Tillich mentions overcomes the anxiety of fate and death. I don't recall that Barb ever talked to me about anticipating her own death, but I'd like to share something she wrote about the relationship between life and death generally:

> There are so many differences in the way people live, in the abilities and the limitations that we have, in the opportunities that do or don't come our way. Working with handicapped people has convinced me that it's the quality of the caring that matters in a person's life, not what she or he was or wasn't born with. It's the quality, not the quantity, that counts.

Finally, in addition to Barb's desire for new experience, and her courage, I only want to underline her gratitude for the gift of life, which to me came through so clearly and in so many ways. Gratitude for her family, friends, clients, fellow students, teachers, her church — all seen by her as gifts from God.

I hope that we can continue to feel that gratitude, as we seek to live out the goals to which she was committed. May Barb's faith in the goodness of God's purposes support us as we respond to our loss of her life among us.

The mystery of Chinese morality

By J. L. Burkholder

J. Lawrence Burkholder, president of GC, is pictured at a restored section of the Great Wall of China north of Peking. (It was a windy day.) He toured China July 6-27 under the sponsorship of Mennonite Central Committee and visited universities, high schools, primary schools, a school for the deaf, art institutes, communes, factories, People's Liberation Army Camp, medical school, children's hospital, industrial exhibition, oil refinery, rug factory and theological college.

His 1975 visit to mainland China was not his first. After World War II he was China director for Mennonite Central Committee refugee and relief program and of Church World Service, involved in famine relief work. His headquarters were in Shanghai.

Among his most vivid memories of his 1944-48 years are his many flights, some with the "Flying Tigers." He also flew a DC-3 and logged 100,000 air miles transporting refugees.

Among the anomalies of modern China, none seems more inexplicable than China's morality. Even if one were to concede that the behavior of the Chinese may not be as correct as it appears on the surface, evidence is sufficient to support the claim that something unusual and possibly unique in the history of mankind has happened.

Certainly Chinese technological progress is also amazing. How they build factories, dams, irrigation wells; how they mine coal and pump oil; how they fish their coastal waters are well known. They simply combine vast quantities of hand labor and modern technology. But how China has been able to socialize, in less than 30 years, some 800 million people into what would appear to be one of the most stable population masses in the world takes some explaining.

A feeling of tranquility

The feeling one gets in China is one of extreme social density and tranquility. These seldom appear together but in Shanghai where streets, houses, stores and sub-divided apartments are crowded, one's impression is that of peace. Thousands of bicycles, trucks, buses and pedestrians flow with a minimum of conflict. There is virtually no shouting or demonstration of frustration or anger. Furthermore, there are no policemen except traffic officers. During my three weeks in China, I saw no guns except those handled ceremonially by guards of government buildings. To be sure the People's Liberation Army was somewhere in the background but there was no public show of force.

Furthermore, respect for property is amazing. As tourists we did not feel compelled to lock our hotel doors. None of us tempted Chinese morals, but it was generally conceded that if any of our group had deposited a camera on a park bench, it would remain there indefinitely unless some one were to refer it to the authorities. Tourists who left an undershirt or a toothbrush behind found it in the mail at the next city. Bicycles can be locked but seldom are. Houses generally are open — children in the neighborhood wander in and out of neighbors' houses as they would their own. On the basis of what we saw, it would appear that honesty is assumed both in public and in private.

Purity in sexual morality

With respect to sexual morality, China is about as pure as one can imagine. Sex outside of marriage is simply not tolerated. It is a legal offense. The Chinese have deliberately de-emphasized sex for the sake of population control and because they see a conflict between revolutionary zeal and romance.

Men and women dress plainly and alike; no makeup is encouraged; no erotic literature can be found on newsstands; men and women are seen primarily as workers — not sex partners. There are no exciting movies, dances or parties. Young couples are seen together — sometimes at favorite spots such as the Garden Bridge at Shanghai, but their elbows touch only by "accident!" Men and women work side by side in heavy industry and high school boys and girls administer acupuncture to each other's abdominal regions without as much as a snicker. It would seem that the Chinese leaders have done everything they can do to direct sexual energies into "socially constructive" endeavors.

No fun of "Old China"

One of the most striking changes in China is the complete absence of fun loving pursuits reminiscent of "Old China." The race track in Shanghai is now a "people's park"; literally hundreds of houses of prostitution in the Hanghew district are now family dwellings; bars and night clubs have completely disappeared. Restaurants close early.

Shanghai's "longest bar in the world" is now a storehouse. By 10 o'clock the streets are virtually deserted; people retire in preparation for an early rise, physical exercise, breakfast and off to the factory or office.

Social approval in a planned society

Everything in China seems to happen as if by intention. It is a planned society. What is socially accepted is what contributes to the purposes of society as a whole. The task of modernizing China along socialist lines is the all encompassing goal. What contributes to that goal is approved; what conflicts with that goal is disapproved. Few concessions are made to personal ambitions.

This means that even the big cities have a small town feel. To many people, China is drab. But if one is attracted by social tranquility, economic stability, strong family ties, full employment including the employment of women, the simple life, excellent health, adequate food, absence of abject poverty, absence of personal wealth, absence of private cars, and absence of inflation, one may find China exciting and puzzling.

The factors in China's achievements

Although China's moral achievements may be difficult to understand in the light of human experience, some of the contributing factors can be isolated.

The fundamental ethical principle to which the nation as a whole is committed is clear and concrete — "service for one's neighbor." "Propaganda" takes the form of incessant appeals to live for others instead of for oneself. This means that one renounces all personal ambitions for wealth, prestige and power. One submits to society, which determines one's place in life. People are implored to work hard, to live simply, to accept criticisms and to eschew prestige. Any recourse to personal ambition is criticized as "revisionism," a term standing for deviation from pure Marxist doctrine as defined by Mao-tse-tung. It is virtually synonymous with "sin" in the Christian vocabulary.

The importance of propaganda

One cannot exaggerate the importance of propaganda in shaping the Chinese mind and character. Signs imploring the people to "live for your neighbors," "to work hard for the people," "to unite with workers for peace" are found in every factory, school and public building. Dramas, dances, radio broadcasts and even art are "revolutionary." "Political" education is a major part of the curriculum at all educational levels.

China has the largest and probably the most intense socialization process anywhere on earth. It would seem that the total impact is so powerful that the individual has no chance to withstand it if it occurs to him/her to do so. What we have in China may be called "total socialization." In some 30 years a generation sealed off from outside influence knows no alternatives to what is offered and expected. Furthermore, individualism has never characterized the Chinese experience. The question, "Can you do what you want to do?" is incomprehensible to the Chinese mind.

The new social order appears to be working

Furthermore, Chinese willingness to adapt to the social order may be due to the fact that the Chinese socialist experiment has worked. People are better fed, clothed, healed, educated and protected than ever before in Chinese history. People generally do not resist a social order that seems to be working for their good.

One must also take into consideration the profound change which the absence of private property brings upon the morality of people. If everyone lives on essentially the same economic level with no prospect for riches and no danger of poverty, most anti-social activities are nipped in the bud. The fact that "money is the root of all kinds of evil" is accepted with dead seriousness in China.

One should also take into consideration the fact that there is virtually no private life in China. The sheer density of population means that Chinese are always under scrutiny. Also everyone belongs to a neighborhood group who assumes a major role in controlling the life of the individual. Everyone is responsible to a "block committee" for his/her behavior. Any deviation from the norm is quickly discovered and almost as quickly punished.

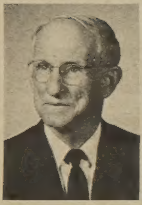
Anyone visiting China cannot help but be convinced that a great change in Chinese morality has occurred. There are three questions, however, which a three-week tour of six major cities, involving about 1500 miles by train and bus, in eastern and northern China did not answer. They are: (1) To what extent is Chinese morality simply conformity due to social pressure and to what extent is morality freely chosen? (2) What are the implications of "total socialization"? What will happen to the Chinese as human beings after several generations within a system in which individual freedom is so narrowly circumscribed? (3) How shall we evaluate the human cost of the revolution — the liquidation of landowners, the stifling of intellectuals, the closing of churches, the politicization of art and literature, and the elimination of all forms of opposition?

These are the questions of one who feels compelled, on the one hand, to praise Chinese achievements. On the other hand, as one looking at China from the perspective of the West with roots in Greek philosophy and Christian theology within which the freedom to choose between good and evil is considered essential to full humanity, one is compelled to ponder whether man as such could be destroyed by enforced goodness. For centuries we have pondered the "mystery of evil"; no less ponderous may be the ambiguity of goodness.

Campus obituaries: Melvin Gingerich '26, Silas Hertzler '13



Gingerich

Hertzler

Melvin Gingerich

Melvin Gingerich '26, 73, archivist emeritus of the Mennonite Church and a familiar campus figure for almost 30 years, died of a heart attack June 24 in Cambridge, Massachusetts, where he was visiting his son and family, the Owen Gingerichs.

His life was one of an historian, teacher, writer, editor. He was managing editor of Mennonite Encyclopedia, managing editor and associate editor of Mennonite Quarterly Review, associate editor of Mennonite Life, and co-editor of Mennonite Historical Bulletin. He was executive secretary of the Mennonite Historical and Research Committee and Archivist of the Mennonite Church when he retired in 1970.

He wrote The Mennonites in Iowa, Service for Peace, Youth and Christian Citizenship, What of Noncombatant Service, Mennonite Attire Through Four Centuries. Just before he left Goshen to visit his son, he had added finishing touches to his manuscript on Edward C. Eicher, U.S. Congressman and head of the Securities and Exchange Commission during the 1930s and 1940s.

For about 28 years he wrote a weekly column for the Mennonite Weekly Review, reviewing books on many subjects. He also contributed many articles to denominational publications.

A teacher, he had experience in rural elementary and secondary schools in Iowa as well as several colleges. He taught Sunday school many years.

In international service, he was Mennonite Central Committee Peace Section representative in Japan 1955-57 and in 1969 he travelled around the world to investigate archival records in the Mennonite mission fields of Latin America, Africa and Asia.

Memorials may be made to the Mennonite Historical Society.

Silas Hertzler

Silas Hertzler '13, 86, author, teacher, counselor and for many years professor of education and psychology at GC, died July 6, at Greencroft Nursing Center, Goshen, IN.

He was a member of the GC faculty 1920 to retirement in 1958. Although his first appointment was assistant professor of religious education, he also served as principal of the Academy for one year, college registrar for seven years, and director of the Goshen College summer session for 13 years. He served as director of teacher education and chairman of the division of education and psychology for 24 years and, even after he had formally relinquished the title, he continued to supervise many student teachers until his retirement. It is probable that he counseled more students concerning their academic program than any other individual faculty member because of the popularity of teaching as a vocational field among students.

In addition to teaching, he wrote numerous articles and book reviews. For 40 years he wrote annually for Mennonite Quarterly Review an article on "Attendance at Mennonite Schools and Colleges." For a number of years he was a regular reviewer of professional books for the journal Educational Administration and Supervision.

He was the author of two books, The Rise of the Public High School in Connecticut and The Hertzler Hartzler Family History.

In 1927 he received the doctorate in psychology from Yale. He was one of the first members of the Mennonite Church who remained a member of that faith after receiving the Ph.D. In international service he was a relief worker 1919-20 in Syria under the American Committee for Relief in the Near East.

Memorials may be made to Goshen College.

Indianapolis Symphony opens L-M series

The Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra will open the 70th annual L-M Series with a Sunday afternoon concert on September 28 in Union Auditorium.

The 1975-76 L-M Series offers seven programs, including the return of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, a continuing favorite judging from audience size and enthusiasm year after year. The orchestra will open the season at 4 p.m. Sunday, September 28, with a concert in Union Auditorium.

The other attractions of the year are: Heritage Hall Jazz Band of New Orleans, performing jazz like it was at the turn of the century, Saturday, Oct. 25, 8 p.m.

Jill Ruckelshaus, who has been involved in every phase of government as it related to women, will speak on Thursday, Nov. 13, 8 p.m. Her topic is "Volunteering: The American Way."

Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing," by the National Shakespeare Theatre, Saturday, Jan. 17, 8 p.m. The drama is one of Shakespeare's finest comedies and is set in 18th century Sicily.

Ohio Chamber Ballet, the resident ballet of the University of Akron, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8 p.m. The ballet was founded in 1968 and its growth has been steady and continual. Its repertoire contains 23 ballets, ranging from classical through modern into rock.

Concordia College Choir, Dr. Paul J. Christiansen, conducting, Wednesday, March 3, 8 p.m. One of the country's foremost college choral groups sings a cappella music from the 16th century classics to the contemporary.

Doug Niedt, guitarist, Thursday, May 6, 8 p.m. His repertoire includes native music of South America and Spain, Renaissance through classical, and contemporary popular.

Season and single admissions tickets are on sale in the Community Relations Office, Administration Building, or at the Union box office before performances. Season ticket prices are the same as 1974-75: Section A Reserved, $20; Section A General, $16; Section B, $10. Single admission tickets are $4 and $3.50 for Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, Heritage Hall Jazz Band and Ohio Chamber Ballet; $3 and $2.50 for other events.

The 1975-76 season is the 70th for the series, which is operated by the college on a non-profit basis for benefit of the campus community as well as the larger Michiana community interested in the arts and public affairs.

THE 1975 ALUMNI HONOR ROLL

Thank you

In behalf of the faculty, staff and student body, I wish to thank you as alumni for your excellent financial support during 1975. We are again reminded of the fact that Goshen College is surrounded by many people who want the college to remain strong. The total amount contributed by alumni was $232,101.22. This is $31,654.89 more than was contributed in 1974 — an increase of 15.8 percent. The average alumni gift was $80.90. This is $15.42 higher than was contributed in 1974. In light of the fact that 1974-75 was a "recession year," we are especially grateful.

As you may know, Goshen closed its 1975 books in the black with a surplus of $2588. It was a difficult year financially. At the outset, we foresaw the possibility of a large deficit. However, a number of favorable factors enabled the college to squeak through. (1) The faculty kept department expenditures within budget. (2) Winter and spring enrollments exceeded expectations. (3) Contributions in all categories were up. (4) A number of individuals responded to special requests with larger than usual annual gifts. (5) Several undesignated bequests were applied to the operational fund rather than endowment.

This is the 36th consecutive year that Goshen has operated in the black. All who are associated with Goshen — alumni, supporting congregations, friends near and far, students and faculty — have reason to be proud. At the same time, however, we are reminded that as soon as we have come through one year, we are faced with another. We know that you, the alumni, are with us as we do our best to implement the mandate for high quality education.

J. Lawrence Burkholder

J. Lawrence Burkholder
President of Goshen College

Our givers of July 1, '74 - June 30, '75

Every effort has been made to be accurate in the preparation of this honor roll of alumni contributors and the special smaller lists of contributors. If your name has been omitted, or if it is listed incorrectly, the Office of Alumni Relations and the Bulletin staff hopes you will be understanding and report the error and the correct information.

The lists published here were prepared in early July. Since that time, a number of contributors have married, remarried or died. Again, the office staff trusts you will understand the original information.

'I sent a gift, but my name is not here'

Did you send a gift in response to the Phonothon, held June 2-5, or in response to the "proofsheet" of the honor roll, mailed in late May, and your name is not here? If your gift was received after July 7, it will be counted in the 1976 Alumni Fund. The College's auditors required the books to be closed during the first few days of July, because the College's fiscal year is July 1 to June 30. However, gifts received up to July 7 in response to last year's alumni fund effort were counted in the 1975 Fund.

Class agent report 1975

Boldface and asterisk denote best year ever in total gifts.

A word of explanation about this table: The honor roll of names in this issue recognize all alumni givers, whether the gift was received for the 1975 Alumni Fund for Great Teaching or for a special, designated purpose. However, this table includes only the gifts for Great Teaching, the theme of the 1975 Fund. The number of givers, the total amount of gifts and percentage of participation reflect only gifts from alumni to the 1975 Fund.

Class of '25 honored on Alumni Weekend

High lights of 1975 gifts

The Class of '30, led by Allen B. Ebersole, was the only class to break all past records in percentage of alumni participation in the 1975 Fund. Its new record is 82.2 percent. Last year in the 1974 Fund six classes broke their percentage of participation records — 1929, 1934, 1941, 1969, 1972 and 1973.

The Class of '75 made a class gift totaling $1361. The funds were divided between lighting the drama center (construction date is pending) and room and board for Kathy Balutansky, a sophomore from Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

Faculty and staff gave a total of $49,451.77 to the college last year. Of this, $34,342.74 was for Great Teaching, and the remainder for designated purposes.

Number of alumni contributors in the 1975 Fund was 2,868, or 24.1 percent response of all those asked to make a gift.

Alumni Support	1975 Fund	1974 Fund
Alumni for Great Teaching (outright gifts for current operations)	$ 232,010	$ 200,355
Outright gifts for special and designated projects and programs	$ 112,985	260,022
Bequests from estates and matured annuities	57,336	776
TOTAL	$ 402,331	$ 461,153
Non-alumni Support
Outright gifts for current operations from church, business and industry, Associated Colleges of Indiana, friends and foundations	$ 469,822	$ 386,195
Outright gifts for special and designated projects and programs	145,806	265,449
Bequests from estates and matured annuities	91,859	76,619
TOTAL	$ 707,487	$ 728,263
GRAND TOTAL	$1,109,818	$1,189,416
Alumni Portion of Total Gift Support	36.4%	38.7%

Honor roll for '76 has already begun

If you would like to join the 1976 honor roll, all you need to do is to make a gift to Goshen College through the Alumni Fund. The 1976 Fund is being conducted during the college's fiscal year, July 1, 1975, through June 30, 1976. All gifts received during this 12-month period will be listed on next year's honor roll.

Your gift may be cash, check, or in the form of securities, real property, objects of art, or books. When the annual report for 1976 is published, your name will be listed, but not the amount of the gift. Remember, every gift of any sort is deeply appreciated.

Forty-five in '75

The Class of 1930's 45th reunion was a luncheon at Schensul's Cafeteria, Concord Mall, Saturday, June 14, 1975.

Left to right, seated: Velma Lapp Hostetler '32, Kathryn Smucker Steiner '30, Sylvia Hostetler Baker '30, Ada Lapp Litwiller '32, Esther Meck Smucker '33, Leahbelle Smucker Kauffman '30, Rachel Arnold Eldridge, Gladys Honderich Yoder '30, Nellie Miller Ebersole '31, and Alta Brenneman Keiser '30. Standing: Wilbur Hostetler '30, David C. Steiner, Chester Baker, Lester L. Litwiller '30, Silas J. Smucker '30, Mabel Roth '30, Mary N. Royer '30, Forrest Kauffman, Murl O. Eldridge '30, Elmer D. Yoder, Allen B. Ebersole '30, and Ora M. Keiser '31. (Photo by Jon Lindahl)

Daryl Nofziger '64, alumni director (right) stands with Charles Gardner '38, and Edith King Yoder '40, two of 29 volunteers who made calls throughout the U.S. in the phonothon in June. (Photo by Fred Steiner)

Ten phones, 3 nights, 2 1/2 hours a night, plus 29 workers equals '75 phonothon

The 1975 Alumni Fund Phonothon was carried out from the main offices of the Salem Bank and Trust Company, Goshen, the first week of June. The goal was to reach as many alumni homes as possible to invite participation in the 1975 Fund and invite an increase in one's gift to help the college compensate for inflation. Calls were made locally as well as nationally.

The results of the effort were: of the 460 calls scheduled, 386 were completed. Gifts totaling $9,530 were pledged and 155 more alumni promised to consider a gift.

To help make the evening spirited and interesting for the workers, the Alumni Office awarded a piece of original student ceramics each evening to the caller who raised the most money as well as to the caller who received the most "yes" pledges. In addition, the two callers who had the best record for the week won a dinner for themselves and their spouses with President and Mrs. J. L. Burkholder.

Winners of the ceramics were: Clifford P. Martin '27 and Edith King Yoder '40, evening of June 2; Burl Troyer '66 and Rich Reschly '68, evening of June 3; and Vince Snyder '53 and Harold Hartzler '56, evening of June 5.

Winners of the presidential dinner were Clifford P. Martin '27 and Edith King Yoder '40.

Volunteers work for Alma Mater

"I am very grateful for what Goshen did for me." "I deeply appreciate my Goshen professors." "I decided to take time to do something I knew was worthwhile."

These are a few of the reasons why alumni, parents of students and friends give of their time voluntarily to Goshen in a variety of ways. Among the ways volunteers served Goshen last year were: class agents, regional meeting leaders and organizers, phonothon leaders and helpers, board members and members of board committees, reunion coordinators, student recruiters for the Admissions Office, and writers of Alumni Fund materials.

Each one's help was significant, and Goshen is deeply grateful for each one's involvement and service.

Corporate gifts received from many sources

Goshen College received a total of $192,860 for operations from corporations, firms and men and women of business and the professions. In addition, $28,962 was received for specified purposes.

Through the solicitation program of the Associated Colleges of Indiana $91,961 of gifts for operations was received. Calls are made each year by the presidents of the 18 member colleges and many leaders of the business and industrial community. Each year this list of corporate donors is published in the Report of Progress of Associated Colleges of Indiana. Space does not permit including the list in the Bulletin.

Gifts from the business, industrial and professional community of Michiana totaled $100,899 for operations. Each year this list of donors is published in the President's Annual Report to the Community. Space does not permit including the list here. The College is profoundly grateful for the support given to the program by all these contributors.

Tribute and Memorial Gifts for special remembrances

Each year friends and alumni pay tribute or honor loved ones, classmates or former teachers with a gift to Goshen College. Some gifts are to memorial or tribute funds set up in previous years; some are designated for library books, with a special bookplate affixed in each volume. Other gifts become a part of Memorial Professorship Funds, Memorial Scholarship Funds, or a special designated project. A detailed report on the use of gifts is planned for a future issue.

A total of $11,971 was gratefully received from 237 contributors through the Tribute and Memorial Gift program during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1975.

Estate gifts and deferred gifts are listed

The work and generosity of 15 persons will survive for generations to come, as a result of gifts from their estates or through life-income plans they arranged for the benefit of Goshen College. The total received this past year through bequests or matured life-income plans was $149,194.

In addition, 12 life-income plans were written in the past year. The total principal of the plans is $111,312. Each deferred-gift plan is tailormade to meet the needs of the donor(s) and to provide the periodic income for as long as he/she is living. In a joint plan, income is provided as long as either of the benefactors is living. The donor's wishes are always followed with regard to the disposition of the bequest or the residue of the life-income plan. Gifts designated for endowment or for whatever purposes perpetuate the usefulness of the donor through all time.

Parents and friends are among givers

Gifts from the friends and parents in the list below totaled $16,069.28 in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1975.

In connection with gifts from parents, it should be mentioned that the Parents Program, under the leadership of Parents Ralph and Betty Martin, also conducted a fund solicitation and received 161 gifts from alumni parents (who are listed with respective class(es)) and 32 gifts from parents who are not former students. The total amount received in the Parents Program was $39,396.20; of this, $30,231.20 was from alumni and counted in the Alumni Fund.

Firms match gift dollars

Over 500 U.S. corporations offer matching gift programs. Some restrict their matching dollars to employees who are alumni and who are supporting their alma mater. However, many extend their matching programs to any employee, with no requirements as to previous college attendance. A list of the companies is available from the Office of Alumni Relations.

In the 1975 Fund, corporate matching gifts to Goshen College totaled $6,634.38.

Suggestions needed for '76 election

Your ideas and suggestions are solicited for the 1976 Alumni Ballot and Election. In the 1975 election only 441 alumni cast ballots — 3.8 percent of the alumni eligible to vote. How can participation be improved?

The May Bulletin, with the ballot enclosed, was mailed from Goshen the week of May 5-9 and response was requested by June 13. Did you receive your copy too late to vote?

Details of the election, the ballot and short sketches of the nominees were published on Pages 11-14 of the 24-page Bulletin. Was this important information "buried" in the paper and no one noticed it?

Thank you for your help.

My suggestions/ideas for the 1976 Alumni Election are:

Executive board discusses long-range planning

Long range planning of events for alumni was begun by the executive board of the Alumni Association in a regular business session, June 14 on campus.

The question was: Should an alumni event be scheduled in the fall as well as the annual Alumni Weekend in the spring? The consensus was that Alumni Weekend be built around a special campus event.

The board also heard reports on the 1975 alumni election (results are published elsewhere in this Bulletin) and expressed concern with the low participation of alumni voters. In 1974, 620 alumni voted, using 447 ballots (husband and wife can use the same ballot if both are alumni). In 1975, 441 alumni voted on 318 ballots. The decrease was 40 percent.

Among the suggestions made to increase voter participation were higher visibility of the candidates in the Bulletin and a different format and better placement of the ballot. (A questionnaire for reader response to balloting procedure is elsewhere in this issue.)

In other business, the board heard reports on projected enrollment for fall (1,091 ± 30 full-time students), phonothon efforts for the 1975 fund (384 alumni were called and response was $9,530 in pledges), total gifts and response to the 1975 Alumni Fund to date, and the Mini-Marine Biology Term in Florida, May 19-23.

The board discussed continuing education opportunities for alumni, reorganization of the standing committees of the Association, and the strengthening of ties between church and alumni. The next board meetings will be in September, January and June.

Practical churchmanship is college goal

Preparing students for better practical churchmanship is a goal of the college in the immediate future, J. Lawrence Burkholder, GC president, told alumni at the annual Alumni Association dinner last June 14.

Two hundred twenty-five alumni attended the evening event hosted in Alumni Memorial Dining Room. Theme of the evening was "Education for Contemporary World Needs." The dinner was the final event of two days of activities of the 1975 Alumni Weekend.

Burkholder said another of his hopes for the immediate future is to be able to prepare students for world-wide relief work. The college has been working with Mennonite Central Committee and Mennonite Board of Missions to understand what students need to know to work at the problem of world hunger.

He explained that church agencies have a definite shortage of personnel for international service. The college is thinking of ways to use courses to meet the need.

Among the other items on the evening's program was an illustrated introduction to the marine biology program at Layton, FL, by Jonathan Roth '59, professor of biology. The Association honored David G. Lehman '50, D.D.S., for six years of service on the executive board; Paul Diller '52, for four years of service; and Donald Minter '50, M.D., Mary Lu Imhoff Smucker '56, and Loren Weldy '54, each for two years of service.

Harold E. Oyer '42, retiring president of the Alumni Association, was also honored; he will continue on the board as past president for two years. In addition, Jocele Thut '50 Meyer was recognized for her leadership as national chairperson of the 1975 Alumni Fund.

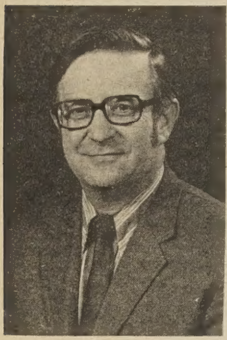
The meaning of accreditation for Goshen College

By John A. Lapp, dean



John A. Lapp joined the faculty in 1972 and is professor of history as well as dean.

This past summer the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools reaccredited Goshen College for the third time since initial accreditment in 1941. The NCA commission of colleges and universities recommended such action based on "the strong administrative leadership, the competence of the faculty, and the basic soundness of its academic program."

What is the significance and meaning of accreditation?

Certification

First, it should be observed that Goshen College has several types of accreditation. Institutional accreditation is covered regionally by NCA and statewide through the Indiana Board of Education. Professional programs are accredited by special groups. In 1974 the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) renewed accreditation of the teacher education program for the second time since the original action in 1954.

This fall, 1975, the National League of Nursing will send a team of visitors to the campus to review the nursing program which has been accredited since 1965. We also expect a visit during the fall trimester from the Council on Social Work Education.

These various accreditations certify that the "institution is offering its students on a satisfactory level the educational opportunities implied in its objectives." Such certification is the result of a process of evaluation and periodic review. Usually this takes place every 10 years.

In most cases, save on the state level, accreditation is a voluntary action. The benefits, however, are substantial. It is a means by which an institution demonstrates accountability of its program. For students it is a recognition that the institution has a reputation for quality instruction.

Certification gives nationwide, even worldwide, status to the graduate of a regional institution. Most states accept NCATE accreditation as a basis for granting teaching certificates. Such certification, the NCA says, "assures the educational community, the general public and other agencies" that the institution deserves the trust of its public in its self-announced tasks.

Evaluation

The process of accreditation begins with a self-examination by the institution. This report becomes the basis for a visit by outside evaluators. The five-person NCA team visiting Goshen came from the University of Wisconsin; Kalamazoo, Muskingum, Hendrix and Simpson colleges. These persons reported to the Commission which in turn conducted a hearing with college representatives regarding the report. After this, the commission made its decision which could range from full accreditation through a variety of qualifications to simply denying accreditation. The latter happens rarely for a previously accredited school. The most difficult hurdle is the initial accreditation.

The main concern throughout the process is to help individual institutions rethink their program and reflect on how well they are succeeding. Some of the major questions include: a definition of the educational task; available resources; organization for this task; adequacy of instructional programs; faculty morale; student life and achievement.

The committee visiting Goshen presented a generous and helpful report. Among the areas of strength they observed:

> An admirable consistency between Goshen College's stated goal, preparation of its students for the ideal of service in their Christian spirit.
> The faculty is . . . strong and competent . . . with some areas of real excellence both departmental and individual.
> The key administrative officers seemed very vigorous, competent and able to work together in an unusually harmonious fashion.
> The Study-Service Trimester has proved to be a distinctive feature of the College's training and is well integrated with its institutional goals.
> The College is soundly and economically operated and should be commended for its budget preparation schedule.
> There is ample evidence of attention to strong cultural enrichment as shown by the exhibit of student productions in art and photography, musical activities of the orchestra and choir, dramatic productions, a well stocked bookstore, the widely varied lecture and music series, and the Pinch Penny Press.
> Student life generally appears healthy.

These are simply major topical sentences lifted from their 13-page report. In addition they listed several areas of concern. They did not call these weaknesses but rather underscored questions already raised by the college report. Again the following are quotations from the visitors' report.

> The library . . . because of the decline in both purchases in the last few years and because of the need for additional staff . . . There seems to be a weakness in the balance of the collection and an absence of a sense of getting books to complement present holdings.
> Since general education is an exceptionally important part of the curriculum of a liberal arts college, the Humane Studies Program should be carefully monitored to assure a meshing of its goals and effective utilization of faculty resources.
> There are aspects of faculty management which the committee believes to be causes for concern: one-person departments, teaching in areas outside principal competence, faculty salaries, a more precise program of faculty evaluation, incentives and development.
> There is a clear need for a student retention policy.
> There is no systematic effort to survey Goshen graduates.

Campus-based persons will question the indications of both strengths and concern. Indeed the college responses to the NCA indicate how we interpret these in the total context of purposes and resources.

Stimulus

The ultimate value of the accrediting and reaccrediting process is, on the one hand, recognition by disinterested investigators; on the other hand, it is the encouragement of institutional improvement.

The experience at Goshen has been most profitable. Actually it was from the observations of the 1965 visiting team regarding the international experience of the faculty that gave rise to SST. At this point nothing quite so obvious has emerged, but we do take their observations seriously and want to respond during the next years to their concerns.

Alumni in choir, visit Poland

The Goshen Community Chorus, directed by Dwight E. Weldy '40, won national visibility last summer when the UPI relayed a story about its goodwill tour to Poland.

The choral group, made up of 42 men and women, ages 19 through 65, toured Poland for 21 days and gave nine concerts. Their travel was under the auspices of the Friendship Generation Program designed by Enculturation, Inc., an educational services organization.

In the group were the following alumni or current students: James Bixler '59, James Clemens '35, Laura Funk '66, David Groff '78, Paul Lantz '32, Rose Lehman '73, Gladys Mumaw '54 Mast, Wendy Meyers '75, Sally Richard '73, Marjorie Tuescher '68, Doug Vendrely '75, Marjorie Conrad '40 Weldy, Mary Weldy '76, Esther Detwiler '65 Yoder, Marcia Schrock '62 Yoder and Eric Zehr '76.

Alumnae among softball champs

Linda Miller '72 Shetler, Dorie Keyser '69, Bernie Beyer '73 Kauffman and Kathy Newcomer '71 Springer were among the 16 on Thompson's Body Shop squad in women's softball, Goshen (IN) city league, last summer.

The team was 10-0 in local competition, 11-2 overall for the season, and went on to defeat Wawasee to capture the district title.

Coach for the team was Bob Souder '70 and assistant was Armon Kauffman '74. The team was featured in the Goshen News on July 17.

YOUR ALUMNI ASSOCIATION AT WORK

Continuing education

Here is a list of adult-education opportunities that have been planned with alumni involvement and participation in mind. Some are sponsored by the Center for Discipleship, some by the College and some by the Alumni Association.

Dec. 5-7, 1975: The Christian's Response to a No-Growth Economy

This weekend workshop is planned by the Center for Discipleship, the Church, Industry and Business Association, and the college economics department to help business persons, congregational leaders and lay members. What is the employment situation in a recession economy? How can future employment patterns be ascertained? How can congregations help unemployed members develop new employment patterns? For more information, write to Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.

Weekend in January or February, 1976: The Mennonite Church 450 Years After

Alumni who are congregational leaders (member of the church council or the board of elders, for example) will look at the purpose and future direction of the congregation. Findings of the Church Member Profile, researched by Howard Kauffman and Leland Harder, will be reviewed. The major question is: What is the Holy Spirit calling the congregation to be and do today and in the future, in light of first-century beginnings and the 16th century Anabaptist renewal? For more information, write to Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.

March 6-17, 1976: Mini-SST to Belize

This is final call for reservations. Only a few places are left for the Mini-SST to Belize.

Vernon and Betty Schertz, who opened the Study-Service Trimester program in Belize (formerly British Honduras) in 1972, and have directed three terms there, will lead the Mini-SST. As a Mini-SSTer, you will stay in the home of a Belizean, hear local speakers describe the social, political and educational aspects of the country, go into the back-country and climb Mayan ruins and visit the Old Colony Mennonites. You'll also visit a fishing village and the brave ones can take a trip out to the barrier reef to snorkle the fantastic underwater world of tropical coral and exotic fish. The fee, based on 20 participants and current costs, is $350 per person from New Orleans, port of departure. Reservations must be confirmed with a $50 deposit per person by Dec. 1. More information is available from Daryl Nofziger, Alumni Office.

March 26-28, 1976: Church Music Festival

The weekend festival, planned by the college music department and the Center for Discipleship, will include group singing, workshops dealing with congregational music concerns, and a mass choral-orchestral performance involving college choirs and orchestra and congregational choral groups. For more information, write to Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.

June 6-12 and June 13-19, 1976: Mini-Marine Biology, Layton, Florida

Alumni and parents of students are invited to a one-week mini-term on ocean life in the Florida Keys. Since 1966, marine biology has been offered annually by Profs. C. Franklin Bishop and Jonathan N. Roth. High lights are use of the labs which have running sea water tanks for holding and observing live specimens, instruction in how to collect and examine marine specimens, offshore explorations. Living quarters are air-conditioned with facilities for light housekeeping. Shuffleboard, bicycles and fresh water swimming pool are available. For more information, write to Department of Biology, Goshen College.

In planning stage: The Church and the Single Person

There are at least three groups of single persons: those who never married, the widowed, and the divorced. This weekend experience would bring some of these persons together to get acquainted, share experiences and feelings as they relate to the church, look at what the Bible says about the single person, and discover ways to help single persons support one another and take part fully in congregational life. For more information, write to Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.

Spring trimester, 1976: Goshen in Europe

Issues: The Reformation in England, May 20-June 11, taught in England by Alan F. Kreider, associate professor of history.

Patterns of Reform and Renewal, June 14-July 2, taught in Europe by C. Norman Kraus, professor of religion.

Studies in Education: Innovations in England, June 14-July 2, taught in London by S. L. Yoder, professor of education.

Comparative Revolutions, July 8-30, taught in Paris by Alan F. Kreider, associate professor of history.

Literature and Society: Celtic Folklore, July 8-30, taught in Ireland by John J. Fisher, professor of English.

The Good Society: Scandinavia, August 2-20, taught in Scandinavia by Theron F. Schlabach, associate professor of history.

All courses above are tentative. More information is available from Office of the Dean, Goshen College.

July, 1977: Alumni Week College

A week-long family-oriented program with fun, recreation and relaxation plus a variety of courses — perhaps art, world food crisis, economics (investments, tax services, money management), Bible studies, geriatrics. Activities are planned for all ages. Watch for more details to be announced next spring — one year ahead of the event. More information is available from Daryl Nofziger, Alumni Office.

"Alumni for Quality Teaching"

Stanley W. Boyer '58, M.D., president-elect of the Alumni Association, is national chairman of "Alumni for Quality Teaching," the theme of the 1976 annual fund. Assisting in the fund organization are Ivan W. Beyeler '68, Donald J. Liechty '41 and Joe D. Yoder '52, all members of the executive board of the Alumni Association.

The first invitation to all alumni to support this year's project — gifts for teachers' salaries and teaching aids — was mailed September 24-25. Later invitations are scheduled for early November, early December, mid-February, and early June. (The fund closes June 30, 1976.) A phonothon effort is planned for May, 1976.

The goals this year, according to Boyer, are: (1) $260,000 in outright cash gifts, and (2) improvement in percentage participation of alumni. Details are not available as this goes to press, but a major Challenge Gift to stimulate greater involvement among alumni will likely be ready for announcement in the early November invitation letter.

Executive board meets

The executive board met in business session the morning of September 13, heard reports on enrollment and finances, and discussed plans for regional club meetings, alumni weekend, continuing education, alumni publications and the annual fund. Committees continued the work of the board in an afternoon session.

One of the efforts of the Alumni Association this year is to help GC recruit students. Leanne Schertz '58, president, sent a letter to all alumni in early September asking for names and addresses of high school juniors and seniors who might be attracted to GC. J. Lawrence Burkholder, GC president, has expressed the problem: Presently only 30 per cent of the Mennonite high school graduates are going on to college, 17 per cent to one of the Mennonite colleges. However, only about 8 per cent of the Mennonite high school graduates in the so-called "middle area" (from Western Pennsylvania border to Mississippi River) are entering Goshen College.

Alumni wrote it

(Received with a gift) This is really a delayed partial payment of the cost of our education which was never billed to us. Sorry you are in financial need, but thanks for letting us know!

We are grateful for an excellent, Christian basic education at Goshen.

Stokesdale, NC

My two profoundest experiences in my four GC years were my initiation into journalism via J. D. Hess and my SST time in Haiti. The demise of either opportunity to future GC students would indeed be an occasion of sadness for me.

Greg Bowman '74
Salem, OH

Having attended classes in various schools, prior to Goshen College, to "pick up" additional credits, I found the peaceful and Christian atmosphere of Goshen College to be most inducive to pleasant learning.

I am grateful to all who made my graduation possible. And a special thanks to Dr. Silas Hertzler.

Nedra Dudley '52
LaPorte, IN

My appreciation for GC grows with the years.

LAST CALL FOR RESERVATIONS

Belize: how to see it as a non-tourist

If you'd like to rush here, rush there, stop for a few quick snapshots, then get back on the bus and rush off again, Vernon and Betty Schertz's Mini-SST to Belize, March 6-17, 1976, is not for you.

Vernon and Betty, who opened the Study-Service Trimester (SST) in Belize in 1972, and have co-directed three terms there, do things a little differently than an ordinary tour outfit.

First, you get a warm welcome from Belizeans just like the GC students get. You stay in their homes, just like the students do. You'll meet government dignitaries and city officials, mingle with many, many people, wander in the open air market, and so on, etc.

The Mini-SST is an unhurried look. You experience many of the things that students experience. . . the back-country . . . the Mayan ruins . . . Belmopan, the capital . . . the Old Colony Mennonite settlement . . . a border town in Guatemala . . . the barrier reef and its fantastic underwater world (if you're brave) . . . and much more.

Vernon and Betty have designed the Mini-SST for you to enjoy Belize the way SST-ers enjoy it. And you'll find that the Belizeans are among the most gracious, yet exuberant persons in the world.

Daryl Nofziger, Director of Alumni Relations
Goshen College
Goshen, IN 46526

I understand only a few places are available on the Mini-SST to Belize, March 6-17, 1976, directed by Vernon and Betty Schertz, and that all reservations now are first-come, first-served.

( ) Please reserve . . . . places on the Mini-SST. Enclosed is $50 per person. (Total fee is $350 per person based on current cost information and New Orleans as port of departure. Your deposit is refunded if all 20 spaces are sold out.) Reservation deposits due December 1, 1975.

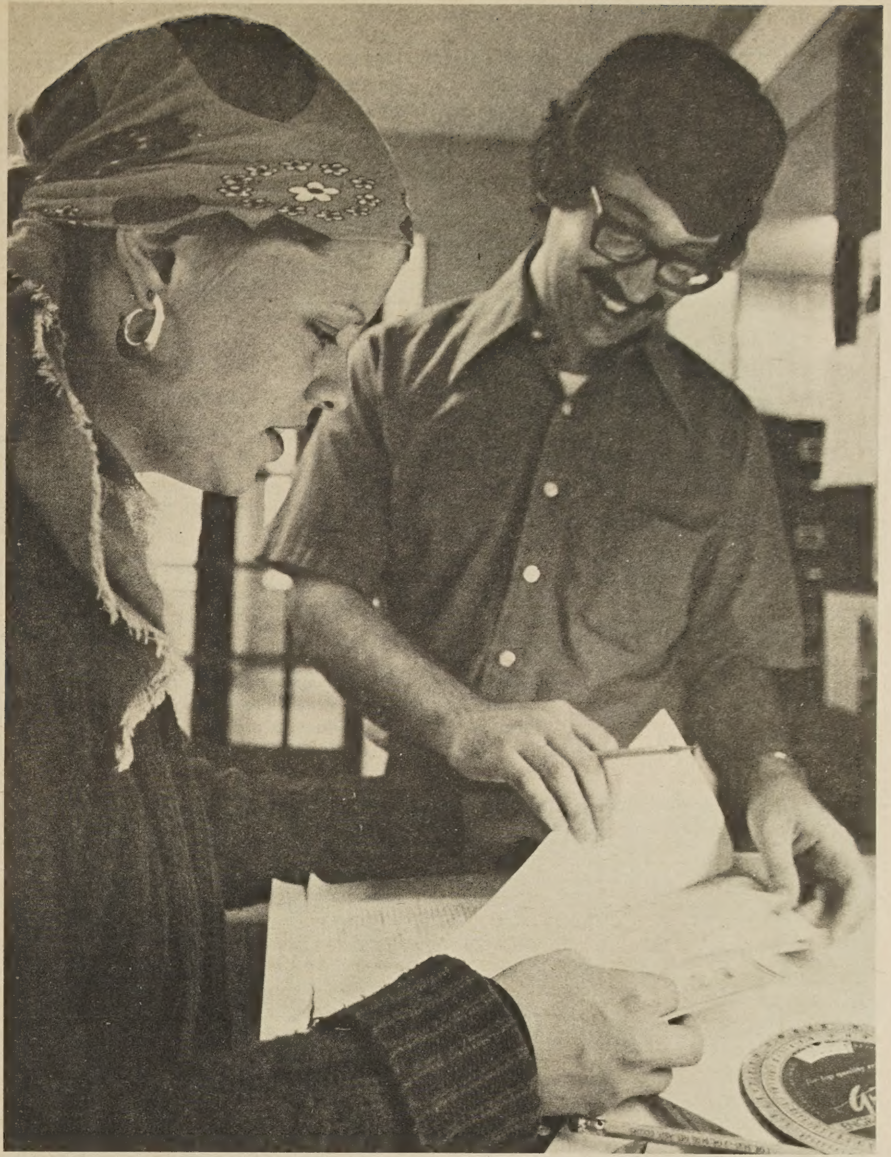
About the Cover: Jon Kennel (left) and Doug Basinger (right background) are in communication practicums at WNIT-TV (Channel 34), public television, in Elkhart, IN, this fall.



Right: Judith Lederach, a senior, was an intern in the layout/design department of Evangel Press, Nappanee, IN, last summer. Her on-the-job supervisor was Paul Hochstetler. Other art majors have completed experiences in similar graphics practicums set up at Mennonite Publishing House, Scottdale, PA.

What Other Student-Interns Are Doing: Daryl Derstine, Carmen Strite and Jerre Bontrager, all business majors in practicums this fall, are researching marketing methods and strategy at Starcraft Corporation, analyzing consumer buying habits and patterns for a local shopping center and studying general management and decision-making practice at Martin's Feed Mill, Inc., in that order. Other students are studying economic and practical conditions of the cattle industry in Indiana, setting up a cost accounting system for a poultry processor, applying management principles to Pinchpenny Press at GC.

A practicum for every graduate

By Orville L. Yoder

Orville L. Yoder, on the faculty since 1970, is associate dean and associate professor of education.

Beginning with the current school year, Goshen College is offering an experimental learning component as a part of every major. Known as the "practicum," the requirement goes into effect for all graduates, beginning with the Class of 1978.

Programs in teacher education, nursing, and social work have always included field experience in schools, health care settings, and social service agencies. More recently, practicums in communication and Bible/religion have been added. Practicums for students majoring in Spanish, French and German include the junior-year abroad.

Goshen College is including a practicum in all majors because of the success students have had in gaining experience and learnings not possible in any other setting. A practicum also reinforces classroom learnings and motivates a student to continue his/her classroom learning because areas of personal need and weakness become apparent.

Finally, at a time when students are legitimately interested in developing saleable skills, the addition of a practicum to a college program provides maximum transfer to the world of work. One of the ironies of today's world is that in preparing for the world of work, one must choose between (1) career narrowness or specificity, and (2) adaptability to many careers, or flexibility.

As one's preparation for entry into the world of work becomes more specifically focused on a given area of work, he/she can lose considerable flexibility in the long run. The addition of the practicum to a broad, general education provides healthy balance between these two competing interests and a base for further career maneuverability and mobility.

Merlin Hoover (above) and Shirley Gerard (below) are in speech therapy practicums this fall set up at Aux Chandelles, Bristol, IN. The students work with their client-youngsters two mornings a week.

Faith and knowledge

By J. Lawrence Burkholder

J. Lawrence Burkholder, in the Orient last summer with a group of educators, is president of Goshen College.

This issue of the Bulletin features an article by Marlin Miller on "The Christian Faith and the Structures of Knowledge." It is a synopsis of a recent address to the college faculty. With this article we wish to acknowledge our deep appreciation for Marlin as newly appointed president of the Goshen Biblical Seminary in Elkhart. We are confident that his leadership will mean much not only for the Seminary but also for Goshen College.

Marlin is a respected biblical scholar with thorough knowledge of Western philosophy as well. We look to him to help us think through some of the theoretical problems which come to liberal arts colleges which seek to be Christian.

Conflict: faith vs. philosophies

Throughout the history of Western civilization there has always been tension and sometimes outright conflict between Christian faith and the predominant philosophies of the day. At the beginning of the modern period, the issue had to do primarily with metaphysics, namely, the nature of reality. Is there a transcendent realm (Kant)?

Later the issue was redefined as conflict between the scientific world view and the biblical view of creation. Not many years ago the issue centered primarily on the origin of man (Darwin).

Thereupon the scientific approach to nature was enlarged to include society as well (Comte) and more recently human beings have been defined by many behavioral psychologists as fully determined animals (Skinner).

The importance of understanding the issues

It is essential that the faculty consider these questions as committed Christians and as members of the church despite the fact that they are seldom resolved. Usually theoretical problems are abandoned before they are resolved.

For example, specific questions about the origin of man and the universe have been largely replaced by questions about human freedom. Today the battlefield is predominantly psychology rather than science. The problem is aggravated by a hiatus between Christian assumptions and behavioral practice in many church-sponsored mental health institutions.

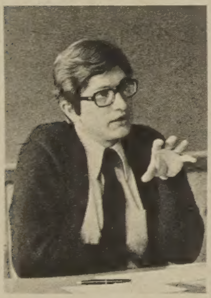
The excitement of putting faith to the test

The attempt to achieve the right relationship between faith and the wisdom of this world is one more burden which the faculty of a Christian college must carry. Most faculty members of secular colleges and universities, by contrast, do not concern themselves with this problem.

Therefore, when faculty members of church colleges tackle issues of faith on the intellectual frontier they need to be encouraged in an exciting but perennial problem.

The Christian faith and structures of knowledge

By Marlin E. Miller



Marlin E. Miller, president of Goshen Biblical Seminary, presented this material to the Goshen College faculty Sept. 3, 1975.

At a Christian college, the concepts of knowledge and the scholars who work with those concepts must be under the Lordship of Christ. Otherwise, knowledge becomes a demonic power, out of control. The Christian college places knowledge in such a way that Christ overrules it and gives order to it. Then knowledge becomes an instrument of His Lordship in carrying out the mission of the New Testament.

This topic is immoderately vast. However, our being at Goshen College gives us at least two clues to begin. The prospectus on general education at Goshen College says that the college places itself within two traditions. The one is the heritage of faith beginning with Abraham, fulfilled by Jesus Christ and reaffirmed by the Anabaptists. The other is the liberal arts tradition reaching back to Greek culture and continuing to present-day colleges and universities. The question remains whether these two traditions conflict with each other, complement each other, or are at least in tension with one another.

The second clue would be that as a community of Christian teachers and scholars we accept the Bible as normative for life and thought. This would also imply that we all participate in relating Christian faith and structures of knowledge. This is not the task of only those who teach Bible and theology. Nor should theology be the one discipline which decides for everyone else how the structures of knowledge are related to the Christian faith. We should rather work toward a college equivalent of the "priesthood of all believers."

Faith and faithfulness defined

A survey of many understandings of "Christian faith" shows that "faith" can usually be defined quite apart from focusing clearly on Jesus Christ. "Faith usually refers to a human attitude, or a passive acceptance of God's grace, or saying yes to a set of revealed truths. Sometimes it means a kind of intuition of divine reality or a sense of ultimate reality.

If we turn to the biblical perspectives however, "faith" is more properly "faithfulness," either God's faithfulness to man, or Jesus' faithfulness to God, or the believers' faithfulness to Jesus as Lord and God the Father. The New Testament itself speaks thus of Jesus' faith in this sense of faithfulness (even though most translations shy away from speaking of Jesus' faith). Faith is therefore primarily a matter of being faithful to God in obedience and love as Jesus Christ himself was faithful. As one biblical scholar puts it: faith — "whether God's, the Messiah's or the saints' — presupposes a covenant relationship between at least two persons in which one partner trusts and is faithful to the other without trying to absorb him and remain alone on the field." As believers in Christ we participate in his faithfulness — this is faith.

Knowledge and learning defined

What do we mean by "structures of knowledge"? "Structure" means something that gives shape, form, continuity — such as the skeleton for the body or the frame for a house. To see knowledge in a biblical perspective we first note that the New Testament does not criticize knowledge or wisdom or learning as such. It rather criticizes knowledge or wisdom or learning as systems for man's grasping toward the knowledge of God by his own means.

Such systems of knowledge try to create their own little world, where God may or may not have a place. Often they will give God a place, but only on their own terms. Knowledge or wisdom or learning in that sense goes against faithfulness to God and to Jesus as Lord.

Structures of knowledge as a 'power'

Let us consider the "structures of knowledge" as one of the realities which the New Testament calls the "powers." These "powers" can be a network of persons and agencies which make decisions and exert pressure. Or these "powers" can be ways of understanding the world and people. In this case the "powers" refer to patterned ways of seeing and understanding reality.

In any case, the message of the New Testament proclaims that Jesus has already been made Lord of all these powers, even though they do not yet accept His Lordship. Even though these "powers" are fallen, Christ uses them to give order to the world. Or perhaps better, in spite of their fallenness, He overrules in such a way that they become instruments of His Lordship, rather than independent and autonomous.

In the university context two of these powers are (1) the concepts which we use to explain people and things and (2) the fraternities of scholars who work and communicate with each other. In both cases, the Lordship of Christ over the "powers" means that we are called to faithfulness in the use of concepts and in participation in scholarly groups.

The danger of 'neutral' concepts dictating a total world-view

Now some concepts are "neutral" and have no direct bearing on faithfulness to Christ. Whether we understand the way things move in terms of "velocity" or "acceleration" helps explain what we see, but deciding that Newton was right in concentrating on "acceleration" is neutral in relation to faithfulness to Christ.

However, if on the basis of such "neutral" concepts we then create a total world-view, the question of faithfulness may arise. Eric Rust talks about this construction of a world-view based on limited knowledge "scientific myth-making." Such "scientific myth-making" may be helpful to test the limits of our knowledge, but wrong if it becomes a kind of idol. Similar examples can be given in all disciplines. Thus Christians' discernment and faithfulness will need to face the challenges of this "structure of knowledge."

The danger of the autonomy of scholars

Another "structure of knowledge" would be the fraternities of scholars, which can also become centers of power and seek to be autonomous. Such fraternities, that is, those who study the same things, can decide what concepts should be used and what parts of reality should be studied. They often also want to decide what questions are "neutral" and what questions are not.

For example, is the use of atomic reactors a neutral question? If using atomic power not only means electricity, but also is dangerous to the environment and people, who decides whether and how to use it? the economists? the politicians? the business administrators? the physicists? Similar questions could be raised in all fields of study — in medicine, education, Bible and theology. Hence the "fraternities of scholars" exercise a kind of power which goes beyond the individual person and tends to acquire more and more power.

This tendency is two-sided — like other "powers" according to the New Testament. On the one hand it is used by Christ as Lord to give order to life; on the other hand it tries to become more and more independent and can therefore also become destructive.

The task before Christian scholars

As Christian scholars, we also belong to another "fraternity," namely the church, which has our prior loyalty. We therefore need to discern, with each other's help and with the help of fellow Christians who are not scholars, where these loyalties are in tension, where they conflict and where they complement each other.

Accepting that challenge and carrying out that task should be high on the agenda of this college community.

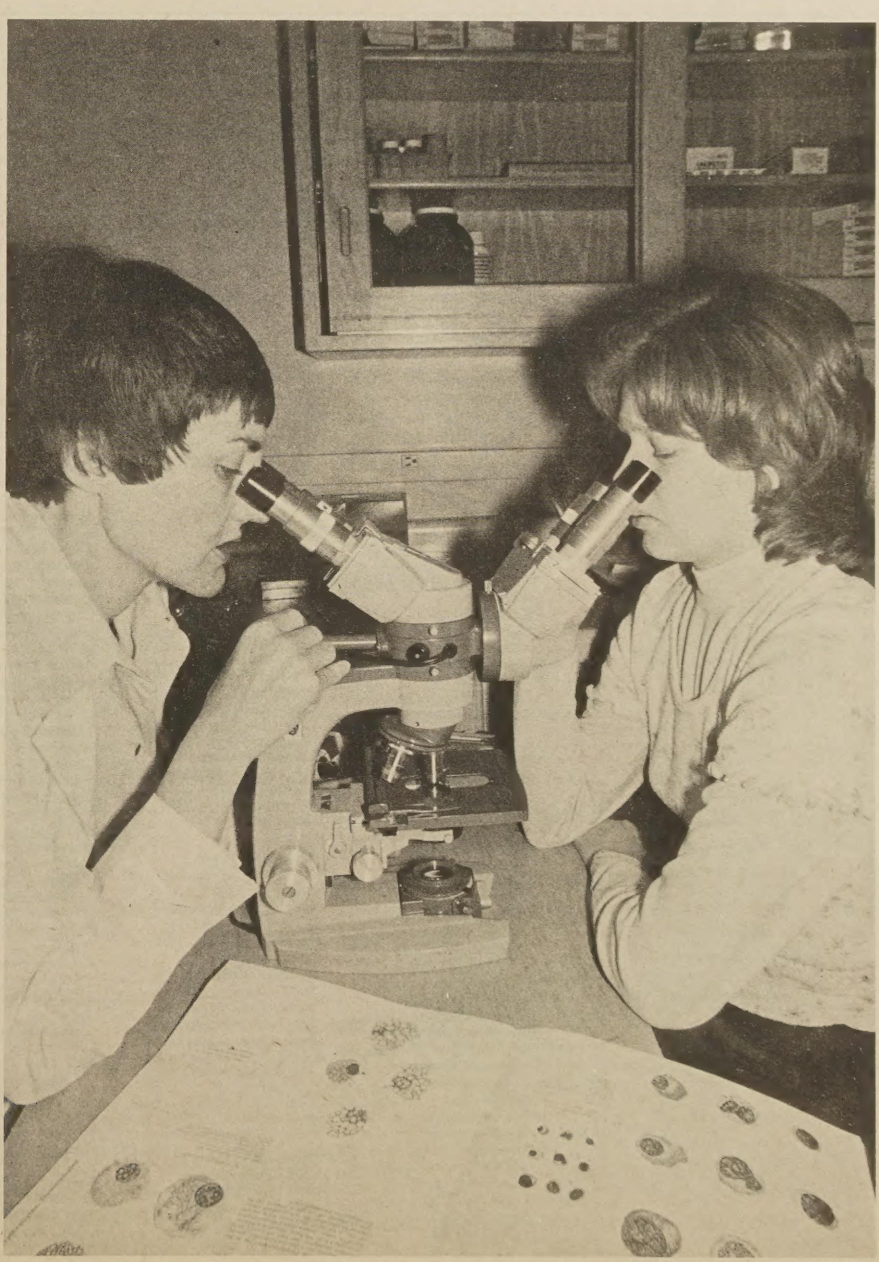
Medical technology program is inaugurated



Anita Martin (right) is one of the five full-time students enrolled in the charter class of the medical technology program this fall. The program is a cooperative venture between the college and Goshen General Hospital.

With Miss Martin is Dr. Peggy Sankey, hospital pathologist, who is teaching hematology this fall. The winter course to be taught in the hospital laboratory is urology.

Graduates of the medical technology program will be eligible for the examination for certification as a medical technologist, MT (ASCP).

A matching gift opportunity

The L. B. Smith Educational Foundation, Inc., has approved Goshen College to be in its matching gift program. It will match from 25 to 50 percent of any gift from an individual or company of $100 or more.

Here is the procedure to follow in order to magnify your gift through this Foundation.

1. Make your check payable to the L. B. Smith Educational Foundation, Inc.
2. Forward your check to the College Relations Office of Goshen College.
3. You will receive a contribution receipt directly from the L. B. Smith Foundation. The Foundation qualifies as a public charitable foundation and contributions are deductible for federal income tax purposes.
4. Goshen College will receive the amount of your contribution plus an additional 25 to 50 percent from the Foundation. In the past the Foundation has matched at the 50 percent rate from September to February, and at the 25 percent rate from February to August.
5. You will be notified by the College Relations Office of the amount added to your contribution by the Foundation.
6. If you are an Indiana resident it will be to your advantage to give the first $200 of your contribution to Goshen College directly, since gifts to the Foundation do not qualify for the tax credit on Indiana gross income tax.

Double your dollar . . .

Have it matched by your company

If you contribute to Goshen College and you are associated with one of the companies whose name appears in this listing, you can arrange to have a second gift sent to GC, courtesy of your company.

Once you have made your own gift, notify the appropriate person at your company that you have done so. A matching check will be sent to GC, indicating that your gift made the matching gift possible. Companies help education in many ways, and the matching gift can be a significant source of support. It is one of their ways of saying thank you to GC for the quality of education they are benefiting from in you, an employee.

So take advantage!

Key to the listing

Every company program listed will match your gift to Goshen College or its alumni fund.

Further, many companies will match a gift even if you are not a former student. And some companies will match your spouse's gift also.

Generally, the program of a parent company applies to its divisions, subsidiaries, and to affiliated companies. Contact your company directly for further information about its program.

To assist you in identifying the details of the company matching-gift programs for the benefit of GC, these codes are used in the list below:

Continuing education opportunities

Looking for an intensive but highly rewarding weekend learning experience? Or perhaps you'd like a week on the keys of Florida, or three weeks in Europe? Here is a list of continuing education opportunities especially planned for adult involvement and participation.

Dec. 5-7, 1975: The Christian's Response to a Growth Economy

This weekend workshop is planned by the Center for Discipleship, the Church, Industry and Business Association, and the college economics department to help business persons, congregational leaders and lay members. What is the employment situation in a recession economy? How can future employment patterns be ascertained? How can congregations help unemployed members develop new employment patterns? For more information, write to Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.

Weekend in January or February, 1976: The Mennonite Church 450 Years After

Congregational leaders (members of the church council or the board of elders, for example) will look at the purpose and future direction of the congregation. Findings of the Church Member Profile, researched by Howard Kauffman and Leland Harder, will be reviewed. The major question is: What is the Holy Spirit calling the congregation to be and do today and in the future, in light of first-century beginnings and the 16th century Anabaptist renewal? For more information, write to Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.

March 26-28, 1976: Church Music Festival

The weekend festival, planned by the college music department and the Center for Discipleship, will include group singing, workshops dealing with congregational music concerns, and a mass choral-orchestral performance involving college choirs and orchestra and congregational choral groups. For more information, write to Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.

June 7-13 and June 14-20, 1976: Mini-Marine Biology, Layton, Florida

Parents of students and other interested persons are invited to a one-week mini-term on ocean life in the Florida Keys. Since 1966, marine biology has been offered annually by C. Franklin Bishop and Jonathan N. Roth, professors of biology. High lights are use of the labs which have running sea water tanks for holding and observing live specimens, instruction in how to collect and examine marine specimens, offshore explorations. Living quarters are air-conditioned with facilities for light housekeeping. shuffleboard, bicycles and fresh water swimming pool are available. For more information, write to Department of Biology, Goshen College.

In planning stage: The Church and the Single Person

There are at least three groups of single persons: those who never married, the widowed, and the divorced. This weekend experience would bring some of these persons together to get acquainted, share experiences and feelings as they relate to the church, look at what the Bible says about the single person, and discover ways to help single persons support one another and take part fully in congregational life. For more information, write to Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.

Spring trimester, 1976: Goshen in Europe

Issues: The Reformation in England, May 20-June 11, taught in England by Alan F. Kreider, associate professor of history.

Patterns of Reform and Renewal, June 14-July 2, taught in Europe by C. Norman Kraus, professor of religion.

Studies in Education: Innovations in England, June 14-July 2, taught in London by S. L. Yoder, professor of education.

Literature and Society: Celtic Folklore, July 8-30, taught in Ireland by John J. Fisher, professor of English.

The Good Society: Scandinavia, August 2-20, taught in Scandinavia by Theron F. Schlabach, associate professor of history.

All courses above are tentative. More information is available from Office of the Dean, Goshen College.

Festival of Church Music set for March 26-28, 1976

The Goshen College campus will host the Festival of Church Music the weekend of March 26 to 28. A committee chaired by Art Smoker, of the Center for Discipleship, is planning a Festival that will bring together up to 2500 persons from across the United States and Canada, and students and faculty from the campus. There will be something for everyone — people who enjoy singing for singing's sake, instrumentalists, members of high school and church choirs, small group musical ensembles (duets, trios, quartets, octets), college choir and orchestra.

The weekend will focus on the church at work in music. The committee envisions a number of mass sessions where all participants will worship and learn together through music. The Mennonite Hymnal will serve as a major resource but more contemporary vocal and instrumental music will also be used.

A variety of workshops will provide teaching-learning experiences to meet the interests and needs of Festival goers. Topics such as hymn writing, what is worship, children's music, black gospel music, singing in the Spirit, the use of the organ (piano) in the church, song leading, and choir directing are possible. The committee solicits ideas for topics that are relevant and practical.

A major event in the weekend will be the performance of Brahms Requiem by mass choir and orchestra. The committee encourages church choirs and informal singing groups, high school choirs, community choruses and other small groups of persons who can get together locally, to begin rehearsing the Requiem. Please contact the College Music Department for details on where to buy music and how best to begin rehearsal preparations. Marles Preheim will direct the final performance which will occur near the close of the weekend.

Further Festival of Church Music details will be reported as they are available. More information is available from Art Smoker, acting director, Center for Discipleship, Goshen College.
